

Australian Journal of Educational Technology

Volume 5, Number 2, Summer 1989. ISSN 0814-673X

Contents

Editorial	ii
The exchange of information on instructional materials: An evaluation for planned change in Australian education	77-88
Michael G. Watt
Evaluation of training and development programs: A review of the literature	89-104
Marguerite Foxon
The use of telecommunications in continuing education in Australia	105-112
Bruce Scriven
Using computers in education: A concerns-based approach to professional development of teachers	113-131
David H. McKinnon and Patrick C. J. Nolan
Rethinking the selection of learning technologies	132-160
John G. Hedberg

The Australian Journal of Educational Technology is published twice a year by AJET Publications. Manuscripts for publication should be sent to Dr John Hedberg, Editor, AJET, Professional Development Centre, University of New South Wales, P.O. Box 1 Kensington, N.S.W. 2033. Enquiries about subscriptions should be sent to the Business Manager, Mr James Steele, AJET Publications, P.O. Box 772 Belconnen, A.C.T. Australia, 2616. Subscription rate is $30 per volume ($40 foreign). Members of the Australian Society for Educational Technology receive an AJET subscription as a part of their membership fees.

Editor's notes

For those with eagle eyes you might have noticed that the last issue was incorrectly identified as Volume 5, number 1, 1988 rather than 1989. We apologize for our error.

AJET welcomes your contributions to the next issue, please ensure that your paper or ideas reach us before the deadline - July 13th 1990 - and preferably a hard copy with a 3.5 inch disc (MS-DOS or Macintosh format).

John G Hedberg
Editor

Editorial Advisory Panel

Rayden Dunbar, Charles Sturt University - Mitchell
Andrew Grieg, University of Sydney
Colin Latchem, Curtin University of Technology
Sue McNamara, Monash University
Alex Millar, Victoria College
John Mitchell, Institute of Education, University of Melbourne
Wendy Priestley, Correspondence School, Sydney