

New Periodicals of 1961—Part II

By GERALDINE KAUFMAN MAURER

OF THE PERIODICALS beginning publication in 1961, which have been received at the Library of Congress, those listed below were selected in the hope that they might prove helpful or of interest to acquisitions librarians. The topics can be approached from the point of view of reference, instructional aids, practical help for patrons, or recreation.

ABSTRACTS. BIBLIOGRAPHY. The Australian National Bibliography, issued by the National Library of Australia, supersedes Books Published in Australia. The listings will be those acquired by the National Library, by copyright or otherwise; those published in Australia or, if published abroad, those dealing with an Australian subject or by Australians. The bibliography will contain also the official monographs listed in Australian Government Publications. There will be an annual cumulation under the same title. Fichero Bibliografico Hispanoamericano is a list chiefly of current books, arranged by the Dewey scheme; each entry is completely cataloged, including notes; one additional item not seen on most catalog cards is the price. This preliminary issue contains works from 12 countries; it includes translations into Spanish. The International Guide to Classical Studies and International Guide to Medieval Studies are in several sections and parts: Current Articles and Minor Contributions; Subject-Index; Review-Index; Index of Authors, Editors, Translators; Index of Reviewers. The journals indexed are those published during the current year; annuals, commemorative issues, conference reports, etc., are not indexed. List of Periodicals in the Field of Nuclear Energy will give information on periodicals so that an intelligent selection can be made by those interested; it is not intended to be comprehensive. Member states of the International Atomic Energy Agency are cooperating in this project. New American Periodicals will cover, substantially, what this feature in CRL tries to do, differing in at least two major respects: it is limited as indicated by title; it will give advance information on projected periodicals (this column is limited to receipts in the Library of Congress, and is more or less selective). Pakistan Scientific Literature: Current Bibliography is arranged, in the main, alphabetically by journal title, and under journal, by authors as they appear in contents. The authors are numbered consecutively and these numbers are used in the alphabetically-arranged author and subject index. The first issue covers, chiefly, 1960 publications, the second issue will list 1961 publications plus any 1960 omissions. An answer to the enthusiasm evoked by a national survey, The Periodical Monitor and Abstract Service; Electronics and Instrumentation Section, will enable scientists and engineers quickly to determine which articles to read, which to eliminate, which merely to scan, in their current literature. The abstracts are numbered consecutively (an aid in the subject and author indexes) under the periodical titles which are alphabetical. There is a listing of new books by subject; of meetings by date; of periodicals monitored (but not necessarily abstracted). The charm of the illustrations should be mentioned—many librarians will wonder why the second issue omits the "picture of the librarian." The January issue of British Medical Abstracts contains abstracts from Annals of the Rheumatic Diseases, British Medical Journal, The Lancet, The Practitioner, and Proceedings of the Royal Society of Medicine.

BUSINESS. The Chart Book, covering over eight hundred items on the American Stock Exchange, contains charts for each stock, arranged alphabetically. According to the chart explanation, a great deal of information can be extracted from the individual charts, e.g.: weekly high, low, and closing; earnings per share, fiscal year end, type of business; weekly volume; date of latest report; current assets, liabilities, and funded debt by millions of dollars; number of common and preferred shares by thousands. The Annals of the Hitotsubashi Academy are being published in five specialized journals, the Hitotsubashi Journal of Commerce and Management being one of the group. The articles in the first issue by faculty members are on interest, accounting, budget in decentralized management, etc. Because sportswear has become a booming business demanding its own publication for retailers, McCall Corporation has begun Sportswear Merchandiser to explain sportswear merchandising techniques and to give advance market news for the small specialty shop, and up to the large department store. The articles in the first issue of Studi e Ricerche are studies on sampling, sampling on population, on banking, on agriculture in Finland, on the Italian paper market. The latter part of the issue is devoted to news notes on business in various countries ("Esperienze Segnalate," "Informazioni sul Settore") and reviews of publications. The Shipper-Motor Carrier Executive will tackle problems of motor carrier transportation. The June issue is devoted largely to freight loss, damage, and liability, with two articles on concealed damage. It also contains items on new products and highlights of conferences of the National Association of Shipper-Motor Carriers. It will be the business of T & DM; Transportation & Distribution Management to narrow the costly gap between technology of design and manufacture, and technology of distribution; it will concern itself with procurement of raw materials, down to putting the finished product in the customer's hand. Special features are an annotated book list and "Transport Legislation in Congress" in tabular form. The American Society of Traffic and Transportation (membership to which is attained through written examination and submission of research paper) is publishing Transportation Journal as an aid in understanding, and as a stimulus in appraising, transportation problems and practices. Among the contributions in the initial issue are articles on freight bills of ca. 150 A.D., the U. S. merchant marine dilemma, proposed changes in transport regulation; signed book reviews are included. In our modern technological society, economic and political changes have created new problems in industrial relations; hoping to make real contribution to these critical fields, the Institute of Industrial Relations, University of California, has started Industrial Relations. Contributions in the first issue, by economists, are directed to the theme "The Employer Challenge and the Union Response." The next topic will be "Work and Leisure in Modern Society," by sociologists; the third topic is "Industrial Relations and World Trade," with contributors from labor and industry. With Erik Bergaust as editor-in-chief, and with eleven other international, experienced journalists especially interested in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, NATO Journal comes into being. Items of interest to decision makers, management, and businessmen will be included: trends in industry, new developments in science and technology, contract announcements, inter-NATO military news, etc. As an outgrowth of requests, the Bureau of Industrial Relations, University of Michigan, will publish in Management of Personnel Quarterly original articles prepared by Michigan faculty or by prominent business leaders for University of Michigan audiences. The initial number has articles on the meaning of leadership, on discipline, on responses to one's orders, on arbitration, and book reviews.

COUNTRIES. Africa Quarterly, from the Indian Council for Africa, is following the trend of new journals issued to disseminate information about Africa, and thus to promote understanding of that continent. The first issue includes "The African Synthesis," by Dr. U. R. Ehrenfels, "Indians in East Africa," by Dr. Amba Prasad, an article on Nigerian art, a section on the council and a seminar it held on Africa, on the Monckton Commission's report, and book reviews, some signed. The new College of Business Management at Achimota, Ghana, is starting The Journal of Management Studies. The June issue includes articles on Ghana company law and management, on the administrative problems attached to the resettlement of the population of a fishing village, on local government service, training of Ghanaians as administrators and accountants, and signed book reviews. Modern Woman is best explained by adding its subtitle, Africa's Leading Illustrated Women's Magazine. It contains articles on nutrition, African womanhood, women in industry, fashion, etc. Through its University College Review, the College at Addis Ababa, hopes to improve the welfare of Ethiopia and the Ethiopian community and the African continent, as well as to focus international attention on Ethiopia. Contributors to the first issue are international in scope; the contributions are chiefly about Ethiopia: its independence, national libraries, orthopedic surgery in Addis Ababa, early travelers, coffee, the University College. Signed book reviews are included. The staff of The Journal of British Studies conceives "British" in the widest possible sense, "studies" as relating to all knowledge pertaining to or drawing upon history; it sets as limits "analysis, synthesis, interpretation and exploratory exegesis." Contributors will be chiefly from the United States, but none will be barred. The first issue contains articles on King John Lackland, Thomas More, John Milton, the Treaty of Dover, Sir Lewis Namier, West Africa, English Conservatism. The journal is sponsored by the Conference on British Studies at Trinity College, Hartford, Connecticut. A highly illustrated magazine from Britain (filed with the U.S. Dept. of Justice under required registration) is Viewpoint. The first two issues are varied in range of contents but all pertain to England. To keep the true Bulgarian culture alive, to make it known, and to give to the new generations—captives of the Soviets—the true historical background, is the purpose of Bulgarian Review published by the "Foyer Bulgare." The first two issues contain articles on Bulgarian history and literature, the church, memoirs, book reviews. India View has a twofold purpose: to give a detailed summary "of current home news to all Indian students and students of India's affairs, and to help strengthen bonds of friendship between India and the United States." Socialist Congressman; a Journal of Congress Socialist Opinion is being issued to explain and interpret the thinking and policies of the Indian National Congress in respect to establishing a socialist society in India. The first issue contains articles on Kashmir, China's border diplomacy, Jallianwala Bagh Day, Pantje, and foreign aid. Most previous publications on Korea in English were done by foreigners trying to depict or interpret Korea to other foreigners; now, as Korea increasingly plays a part in world politics, it has seemed best for the natives of that country themselves to portray it. The first issue of Korea Journal, illustrated, contains articles on Korean politics, democracy, and economics, General Park, art, education, and book reviews.

CURRENT EVENTS. A new news magazine is being launched in Montreal, Canada Month, with illustrations, especially portraits of people in the news.

DEFENSE. Civil Defense Magazine intends to disseminate information on the vital subject of nonmilitary defense in nuclear warfare. The first issue has articles on practical aspects (shelter, food) and on more technical aspects (cheaper methods of getting material for atomic bombs).

ECONOMICS. The Department of Commerce, Osmania University in India, is publishing Applied Economic Papers, the initial issue of which contains articles on phases of Indian economy (land reforms, metallurgical industries, profits and wage sharing). Signed book reviews are included. Desarrollo Económico contains technical articles on economics (e.g., how to analyze economic growth); the relationship between distribution of income and the degree of development in underdeveloped countries; land tenure in Argentina; agricultural development in Uruguay; etc. Signed book reviews are included. The newly founded Hong Kong Economic Association has begun Hong Kong Economic Papers to present problems in economics, foreign and local. The June issue contains lectures before the association, as well as articles on trade between Hong Kong and the Chinese mainland, oil legislation in Indonesia, and the First Conference on Income and Wealth in Asia.

EDUCATION. The Journal of American Indian Education, under an editorial board composed of authorities on that subject, will present articles from anyone who has information to impart on any facet of the education of Indians, any kind of school, any level of instruction. The contributors to the first issue are actively engaged in education or guidance, or in direct work with Indian affairs. It includes book reviews. Overseas; the Magazine of Educational Exchange will be devoted to educational exchange programs and the importance of education in international development, to draw world attention to these matters, and to report new programs. The first issue contains articles by Dean Rusk, Henry Cabot Lodge, Albert G. Sims, André Maurois, James M. Davis, and others. Signed book reviews are included.

JOURNALISM. Stirred by a sense of duty, the Graduate School of Journalism, Columbia University, is launching Columbia Journalism Review to study and judge journalism, to strengthen its good features, to bring to light its weaknesses. All methods of relaying news to the public will be under scrutiny.

LAW. Although the Natural Resources Journal will not be limited to resources problems, it will nevertheless be largely devoted to this vital area. A general section contains articles on peaceful purposes of nuclear explosions, oil and gas leases, water in California, resources management, etc.; another section contains articles on laws in New Mexico—criminal code, annulment of marriages, real property statutes. Signed book reviews will be included. A complement to the Bulletin of the Copyright Society is the new Publishing, Entertainment, Advertising, and Allied Fields Law Quarterly. In addition to original articles, it will contain reprints, practical as well as technical, thus appealing to the lawyer and the businessman. The first issue has articles on titles litigations; food, drug, and cosmetic advertising; the right to shield a "reliable source"; protection for "uncopyrightables"; tax discrimination against artists. Under the directorship of Dr. Agricol de Bianchetti in Buenos Aires, Revista de Derecho Deportivo is in two sections, "Doctrina" and "Legislación." The first part contains articles on football, sports in education, sports associations, sports as a political-criminal problem; the second part has the statutes and bylaws of the Fédération Internationale de Football Association.

LITERATURE. The newly founded Assam Academy for Cultural Relations has begun The Assam Quarterly in which to publish cultural articles on Assam and its literature, including translations. The authors of the poems and stories in Chrysalis Review are not limited to any geographic area or field, although several are teachers of English. The linguist (Okyeame) is the recognized channel of communication in Ghana between tribe and chief; Okyeame is to be a channel of communication for Ghanaian writers, and the first issue contains poetry, prose, drama, and illustrations. It is in English; one article contains folk songs in Ghanaian languages, with a discussion and English translation. There are book reviews. The publication of Drama Survey has been made possible through a grant from the McKnight Foundation. The Spring issue contains a wide variety of articles, from those on Shaw and Shakespeare to an article on dramas which show revolt against the image of authority; there is also a contribution from Sir Tyrone Guthrie. Signed book reviews are included. Under the direction of Pedro Aurelio Fiori and Daniel R. Sobico comes Cuadernos de Poesía, whose initial issue contains poems by the directors only. Most of the contributors to the first issue of Elizabeth; a Magazine of Modern Elizabethan and Metaphysical Poetry have had poems published elsewhere.

HISTORY. RELIGION. Resulting from the Moscow Document of November 1960, from resolutions of the Sozialistische Einheitspartei Deutschlands, and within the plan of the Government of the DDR, Unsere Zeit comes from East Germany to depict the social history of postwar Germany, especially the zone under Russian influence. Included are book reviews and indexes of pertinent periodicals, both German and Russian, arranged by broad subjects. The History of Religions will be "devoted to the study of historical religious phenomena. One of its primary aims is the integration of the results of the several disciplines of the science of religion; its articles will have a synthetical character in order to acquaint the reader with the progress being made in the general area of the history of religions (Religionswissenschaft)." Biographical notes on the contributors are included. The Society for the Scientific Study of Religion intends the Journal for the Scientific Study of Religion to serve as a forum for those who study religious attitudes and activities. The October issue has papers on a symposium, "Theory and Methodology in the Scientific Study of Religion;" several articles from an empirical approach; contributions to "Bibliographical Focus: Ernst Troeltsch;" and signed book reviews.

MEDICINE. PSYCHOLOGY. With Elinor Ulman

as editor (and founder) the Bulletin of Art Therapy is a pioneer in the new field of using painting and sculpturing in psychiatric treatment. The plan is to include at least one article on theory to arouse discussion and creative thinking; notices about meetings, exhibitions, etc.; about articles in other periodicals; and book reviews. The Journal of Humanistic Psychology will publish articles "of theoretical and applied research, original contributions, papers, articles and studies in values, autonomy, being, self, love, creativity, identity, growth, psychological health, organism, self-actualization, basic need-gratification and related concepts."

MUSIC. Bravo, Magazine of the Lively Arts will be a serious, lighthearted, enthusiastic magazine about music, about those who make it, about those for whom it is made. The first issue contains articles on the Pierre Salingers, new pianists, Virgil Thomson, American singers in Europe, caricatures by Mrs. Koussevitsky, etc. The Hungarian Academy of Sciences (Magyar Tudományok Akademia) is beginning Studia Musicologica, which will contain articles on Hungarian musicology, on music history, on Hungarian collections of manuscripts of foreign composers, and general notes concerning congresses and meetings. Articles may be in English, French, German or Russian; the first issue has no articles in the last-mentioned language. This initial issue has articles on Mozart, on J. G. Albrechtsberger, Ferenc Erkel, and on music in Hungary in the Middle Ages.

PRINTING. Graphic Technology aims "at dealing with the developments in all methods of printing illustration, the materials and apparatus used, the best ways of using them, and why. Our interest will cover not only photographic and chemical materials, but also paper and ink in their technical and functional aspects."

RECREATION. The newly formed American Boxwood Society is issuing The Boxwood Bulletin to share problems and exchange experiences of growing buxus. Marina Management will devote itself to waterfront facilities with the accompanying merchandising problems, believing that the growth of marinas will resemble that of motels. It contains notes on new products—food, drink, boat equipment and accessories. "Show will be the definitive magazine of the performing arts, and our view of those arts will be broad." Exploration will be devoted to inquiries into new areas, and new inquiries into old areas; it will attempt to spread knowledge of man to man in an interesting way. "Great Religions," "Cities of the East," signed book reviews and a profile page are to be regular features. In addition to these, the first issue has illustrated articles on Maori carving, Albania, the Dinkas, on Vinoba Bhava, geology, Lapland, etc.

SOCIAL SCIENCES. The Boletín Uruguayo de Sociología will air the current sociological problems of the day, but especially those of Latin America and Uruguay. The first issue is in sections (Uruguay, Latinoamérica, Internacional, Bibliografía) which are divided (save the last section) into Información, Doctrina. The Información has news items about meetings, congresses, institutions. The Doctrina contains articles from scholars on an international basis: Isaac Ganón, Aldo Solari, Alfredo Poviña, Alfonso Trujillo Ferrari, Pitirim A. Sorokin. As a continuation of Ciencias Sociales, published 1950-56, the Department of Social Affairs of Pan American Union has begun Revista Interamericana de Ciencias Sociales. It will disclose trends in social disciplines, particularly those which apply to Latin America. The first issue has, among others, an extensive contribution, "Los Lenguajes Indígenas de América Latina"; signed book reviews are included. The second issue is devoted to the theme "La Agricultura y el Desarrollo de la Civilización en Mesoamérica."

SCIENCE. A new journal, The Australian Scientist, from New South Wales brings news of scientific development in Australia; it hopes to stimulate interest in that field among Australians. Because enzymology has emerged as a fundamental science, and a strong interest in biological enzymology has developed, scientists have felt the need for a journal and Enzymologia Biologica et Clinica hopes to fill that need. The articles in the first issue are: "Anomalie de l'Aldolase Hépatique dans l'Intolérance au Fructose"; "Localization of Dehydrogenases and Glycogen Metabolizing Enzymes in Muscle Tissue of the Desert Locust"; "Uber Enzyme der Glykolyse in Leukozyten von Kindern"; "Serum Ornithine Transcarbamylase Activity in Normal Individuals." Although originally only of interest to physical scientists, the concepts of transmission of information are now appealing to biological scientists in studying how organisms handle information; and in return, physicists are becoming interested in the procedures by which organisms cope with communication and control. Kybernetik will publish both theoretical and experimental articles in this exchange. The Crop Science Society of America has begun Crop Science as a vehicle for unpublished papers on research in field crops including genetics, cytology, physiology, ecology, and breeding; articles which formerly might have appeared in the overburdened Agronomy Journal. Articles in the first issue are accompanied by bibliographies and summaries; some are illustrated. The last page is devoted to signed book reviews. The articles in the first issue of Radiation Botany are in English, French, and German, and are the reports of research performed chiefly in the United States and Great Britain. The journal will report, mainly, effects of ionizing radiation on plants or plant structure. Signed book reviews are included. Important and current technical chemical literature from the Soviet Union, Eastern Europe, and Asia will be translated in International Chemical Engineering. A list by country of the journals received is included. Represented also are items dealing with information retrieval, "based on the concept-coordination system of information storage and retrieval." Phytochemistry will publish articles on pure and applied research in basic metabolic processes of plants. The technical illustrated articles are preceded by abstracts; they may be in English, French, or German. Still another chemical journal Zeitschrift für Chemie, has been undertaken, this one from the Eastern Zone of Germany, under the auspices of the Chemische Gesellschaft in der Deutschen Demokratischen Republik. This publication contains technical articles, short report articles, and signed book reviews. Geofisica Internacional will contain original articles on geophysics in Spanish and in one of the following: English, French, German, or Russian. Thus, Spanish will be promoted as a medium of scientific expression, and at the same time contributions by Spanish scientists will be circulated. The first issue is a lengthy article, in Spanish and English, "Pene-Con-temporaneous Tectonics along the Mexican Pacific Ocean Coast," by F. Mooser and M. Maldonado-Koerdell. Nordisk Tidskrift for Informationsbehandling will contain articles on numerical analysis, data-processing, and computer-technical problems in English, French, or German, with contributions chiefly from the five Scandinavian countries. Articles in a Scandinavian language will have a summary in English. The editor and publisher of The System Analyzer; a Bulletin for Those Concerned with Digital Differential Analyzers and Their Applications, George F. Forbes, has also written most of the contributions in the first issue. In addition to illustrated technical articles, there are book reviews and a bibliography. The Applied Physics Laboratory, Johns Hopkins University, "requires a synthesizing agent to preserve the over-all pattern of its activities, not only for the benefit of its own staff, but also for the benefit of scientific and engineering colleagues throughout the world." The agent is the APL Technical Digest. The initial issue of Beiträge aus der Plasmaphysik contains four original technical articles by workers in German research institutes: "Zur theoretischen Begründung des 'Minimumprinzips' für die Spannung einer Gasentladung und einige weitere Folgerungen"; "Beitrag zum Problem der Entscheidbarkeit der Gültigkeit eines Prinzips extremalen Energieverbrauchs beim Stromdurchgang durch einen Leiter"; "Die positive Säule der Argon-Niederdruck-Entladung im Übergangsbereich I"; "Die Berechnung von Energieverteilungen relativistischer Elektronen aus ihrer Synchrotronstrahlung. Anwendungen auf den Krebsnebel." Physica Status Solidi will publish results of original research conducted in solid-state physics. Articles are chiefly in German, a few in English; most are preceded by summaries in both the German and English languages.

Book Selection Publication Launched

The establishment of a publication to provide a book selection service for college and university libraries was announced jointly by the American Library Association and the Council on Library Resources. The publication will be issued every two weeks and will contain about 16 pages of editorial matter plus advertising.

The service, called a "Current College-Level Book-Selection Service," would up-date the widely used Charles B. Shaw publication, A List of Books for College Libraries. Though supported initially by a grant from the Council on Library Resources, the publication is expected to become self supporting. It would be under the direction of the Association of College and Research Libraries, a division of the A.L.A.

The periodical will be produced by the recently developed Listomatic sequential camera which would compose information concerning book selections directly from typed cards.

The periodical's staff will consist of a managing editor, associate editor, bibliographic assistant and two clerk-typists in addition to reviewers, all subject experts involved in undergraduate instruction.

An estimated 10,000 to 15,000 titles per year will be considered and 2,000 to 3,000 titles will be reported. The publication is to be directed primarily to undergraduate college libraries with book funds of $30,000 or less.

The objective of the service is to provide a reference and advisory guide to inform librarians, faculty, students, scholars, and the general public of the more important current publications on any subject. The publication, supported initially by a $150,000 grant, is expected to review simultaneously with the publication date of the books or as soon thereafter as feasible. Coverage will include publications in English, wherever published, of potential desirability on all college campuses. Representative publications needed for understanding of the world would be included in addition to the 'best' publications. Coverage of other languages will be considered later.

In addition to using experts for reviews, authoritativeness would be sought through the cooperation of learned groups such as the American Council of Learned Societies, Social Science Research Council, and the National Research Council. Religious and other special interest groups would be allowed to contribute titles and annotations for the publications of particular interest to their group.
