writing" and other "verbally oriented occupations." This is not such bad company to be in; perhaps the career changers would like to reconsider.—Laura Fuderer, Memorial Library, University of Notre Dame, Indiana.

ABSTRACTS

The following abstracts are based on those prepared by the ERIC Clearinghouse of Information Resources, School of Education, Syracuse University.

Documents with an ED number may be ordered in either microfiche (MF) or paper copy (PC) from the ERIC Document Reproduction Service, P. O. Box 190, Arlington, VA 22210. Orders should include ED number, specify format desired, and include payment for document and postage.

Further information on ordering documents and on current postage charges may be obtained from a recent issue of Resources in Education.

Committee on the Records of Government.

Report. American Council on Learned Societies, New York; Council on Library Resources and Social Science Research Council, Washington, D.C. Sponsored by the Alfred P. Sloan, Andrew W. Mellon, and Rockefeller foundations. New York: 1985. 182p. ED 269 018. MF—$0.75; PC—$14.40.

A privately sponsored and privately funded committee was organized to identify and propose means by which governments at all levels might rid themselves of needless and wasteful records while ensuring the preservation of that fraction of the documents deserving to be kept. The committee concentrated on problems and solutions within the federal government, but the principles underlying the conclusions and recommendations can be adopted by individual states and localities. This report of the committee includes an introduction and sections on: "Development of Records Management"; "Records Management 1950-1984"; "Computer Generated Records"; "Special Characteristics of Electronic Records"; "Information Resource Management"; and "Importance of Leadership." Five major conclusions and three detailed recommendations complete the report. A draft of a proposed executive order is attached as well as a list of participants and additional interviewees. Appendixes include overviews of the government records programs and conservation efforts, a technology assessment report of the National Archives and Records Service, and additional information, including significant related legislation and regulations; selected surveys and studies; elements of a comprehensive government records program; principles for state archival and records management agencies; National Archives and Records Service appraisal guidelines; and examples of federal government records schedules. An index is provided.

End-User Searching Services. SPEC Kit 122. Washington, D.C.: Association of Research Libraries, 1986. 134p. ED 269-022. MF—$0.75; PC—Not available from EDRS.

In mid-1985, researchers contacted librarians at twenty-three United States and Canadian universities to determine what end-user activities were taking place with the involvement and cooperation of the library. Although most of those contacted were members of the Association of Research Libraries (ARL), a few non-ARL libraries known to have active end-user programs were also called. This Systems and Procedures Exchange Center (SPEC) kit contains information on the SPEC telephone survey (questions asked and libraries contacted); one grant proposal (University of Illinois); five program descriptions (Cornell University, Memphis State University, Pennsylvania State University, Texas A&M University, and University of Pennsylvania); four examples of publicity (same libraries as above except for Pennsylvania State); nine sets of instructional aids and references tools (same libraries as program descriptions—two items from Pennsylvania State—plus Drexel University, Johns Hopkins University, and University of Ottawa); six evaluations/questionnaires (Cornell, Drexel, Memphis State, Pennsylvania State, Texas A&M Universities, and University of Ottawa); and a select bibliography. A brief introductory sum-

THERE'S ALWAYS A BETTER WAY TO LIGHT THE DARKNESS

Imagine where we'd be if Mr. Edison had failed to experiment with a simple piece of thread, under a simple piece of glass. But he persevered.

Today's information manager is a marvel of perseverance. And when you light the darkness with information day after day, you expect support from people who pursue innovation as stubbornly as Mr. Edison.

You can count on EBSCO to persevere when it comes to bright ideas in subscription service. Just as important, our staff is dedicated to helping you put those ideas to work in your own serials department—not tomorrow or the next day—but now, when you need them the most. So, whenever you need subscription services with an emphasis on service, call EBSCO. We'll never leave you in the dark.

The Indivisible World. Libraries and the Myth of Cultural Exchange. By Daniel J. Boorstin. The Center for the Book Viewpoint Series, no. 15. Washington, D.C.: Library of Congress, 1985. 14p. ED 269 036. MF—$0.75; PC—$1.80.

These remarks suggest that, although the world's cultures—and the culture of books—may be defined by languages, by traditions, and by historical movements, they are not confined by national boundaries: all boundaries in the world of culture and ideas are artificial, and all are doomed to be dissolved. Since all culture belongs to all people, books and ideas create a boundless world, and librarians of the world are servants of an indivisible world. To keep that world indivisible is the most urgent and most difficult task for librarians. Political, economic, or military chauvinists who would like to make libraries narrowly national, and ideologues who try to sanitize the books that are published, are the enemies and saboteurs of the work of the world's librarians. The Library of Congress (LC) is attempting to serve an indivisible world of culture and books and ideas: only about one-quarter of the library's books are in English, while three-quarters are in the other languages of the world. In collecting and preserving other cultural objects—photographs, graphic art, motion pictures, music, and maps, LC tries to display the full spectrum of the cultures of mankind. Despite the cost and time-consuming nature of this effort, LC does not allow itself to be confined by the cultures of Europe and the West.
