Retirements

Marilyn R. Pukkila, research and instruction librarian for Social Sciences and Humanities will be retiring in June 2019, after a 40-year career in academic librarianship, with the last 35 years spent at Colby College. Pukkila has been a reference and research librarian during her entire career, beginning at Fairfield University in Connecticut. After three years at Fairfield, she spent a year at the University College of Wales-Aberystwyth. Upon returning to the United States, Pukkila took a job at Colby College, where she had multiple responsibilities over time, including supervision of interlibrary loans, head of instructional services, reference supervision, and circulation/reserves supervision. She also worked for a sabbatical year at the York Minster Library and Archives in England. Pukkila published her book The Skill of a Seeker: Rowling, Religion, and Gen 9/11 in 2015, and has published numerous articles, including several for C&RL News, CHOICE book reviews, and essays on topics as diverse as pedagogy, assessment, contemporary witchcraft, and qualitative library research.

Deaths

William (Bill) Gosling, former director of the University of Michigan (UM) Library, has died. He entered the Library of Congress internship program in 1966. Drafted into the Army, he served for a year in Vietnam, where he was commended for Soldier of the Month in May 1968 and later received a Bronze Star for his service. Upon returning to the Library of Congress, Gosling worked in the MARC Development Office and ran the Cataloging in Publication Program. In 1976 he served as head of technical services at Duke University Library until 1986, when he took the same position at the UM Library. In 1997 Gosling served as interim director of the UM Library, and, in 1998, he was chosen to take on the job permanently. His lasting legacy includes committing the library to the Google Books Project, which later grew into HathiTrust Digital Library. After having heart surgery, in 2005 he decided to step down from the director position, and he worked for three years as curator of Children's Literature in the Special Collections Library, which he had helped grow by donating his extensive pop-up book collection. After retiring, he continued selecting children's books for the UM libraries in Ann Arbor and Dearborn.

Arlene E. Luchsinger, academic librarian for 50 years before retiring as assistant director for Branch Libraries and head of the Science Library at the University of Georgia (UGA) Libraries, has died. Her career included working as an academic librarian at the duPont Library, University of the South (Sewanee Tennessee, 1965–67 and 1970–73), the Pullen Library, Georgia State University (Atlanta, 1975–76), and the UGA Libraries (Athens, 1976–97). During her tenure at UGA, the collection of science books and journals grew from about 250,000 volumes to more than 750,000 volumes. As a professional librarian, she was active within ALA, with memberships, and committee work in ACRL and LAMA. She wrote numerous essays, book reviews, and articles for both agricultural and professional academic library publications. She was the coauthor of Smith's Guide to the Literature of the Life Sciences (1980) with R. C. Smith and W. M. Reid. She was also the coauthor of Plant Systematics with Sam Jones (1979; 2nd edition 1986). She is survived by her daughter, Caroline L. Gilson, associate dean of libraries, and coordinator, Prevo Science Library, DePauw University (Greencastle, Indiana). ♪
