MARY FRANCES COLLINS has been appointed director of central technical Services in the University of Minnesota Libraries, Twin Cities, effective October 17. She comes from the University of Illinois, where she has been director of public services for the past five years. Previously Collins was associate university librarian for technical services at Rice University (1977-1978) and assistant director for technical services at the State University of New York at Albany (1972-1977). She has also held positions at the Junior College of Albany and the Naval Post-Graduate School.

Mary Frances Collins

Collins is a graduate of Simmons College and holds a masters degree in library science from the State University of New York at Albany. She has been very active professionally, particularly in the American Library Association, where she has served as Chair of the RTSD Technical Services Administrators of Medium Size Research Libraries Discussion Group; Chair of the ACRL Publications Committee; a member of the LAMA Statistics Section Coordinating Committee; LAMA representative to the ALA Catalog, Form, Function and Use Committee; and editor of College & Research Libraries News (1975-1977). She is currently a member of the Executive Board of the Illinois ACRL chapter.

MARY WALLACE DAVIDSON, music librarian at Wellesley College, has been named librarian of the Sibley Music Library at the University of Rochester's Eastman School of Music, beginning July 1, 1984.

Sibley Music Library contains the largest collegiate music collection in the country. Founded in 1904 by Hiram Sibley, the library was incorporated into the Eastman School in 1921 and now has resources numbering more than a half-million items.

Davidson will succeed Ruth T. Watanabe, librarian of the Sibley Music Library since 1947 and professor of music bibliography at the school. Watanabe will continue at Eastman as the school's historian, in order to write a definitive history of the 62-year-old school. She also will continue her other scholarly research and writing and, for the Music Library Association (MLA), will continue to compile the quarterly "Music Received" section for MLA Notes.

Davidson holds a bachelor's degree from Wellesley and an MLS from Simmons College. She was music librarian at Radcliffe College for three years before joining Wellesley in 1967, and previously served as music specialist for the Brookline (Mass.) Public Library.

She is president of the Music Library Association and serves on the board of the Sonneck Society (for American music). She has held offices in the MLA's New England chapter and has been coordinator of the Boston Area Music Libraries; she served on the editorial committee of the Boston libraries' Boston Composers Project, published in 1983 by the MIT Press.

Her publications include contributions on libraries and collections in the United States and Canada to The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians (1981) as well as to its forthcoming companion volumes for the United States. She is also co-author of 18th-Century American Secular Music Manuscripts: An Inventory, published by the Music Library Association in 1980.

MICHAEL ANN MOSKOWITZ has been appointed director of the Emerson College Library, Boston, effective June 20, 1984. Moskowitz holds an MLS and is a doctoral candidate at the Simmons Graduate School of Library and Information Science. She holds an M.A.T. in social sciences from Johns Hopkins University and a bachelor's degree in economics from Elmira College.

Moskowitz comes to Emerson from the Simmons College Graduate School of Library and Information Science where she was librarian and lecturer. She has served as library director for Quincy High School, and for the Beaver Country Day School. Moskowitz has published extensively in the areas of non-print media management and library micro-computer applications.

LARRY HARDESTY has been named director of library services at Eckerd College, St. Petersburg, Florida. He has served as head of the Reference Department at DePauw University since 1975, where he directed a Library Services Enhancement Project (1976-1977) sponsored by the Council on Library Resources, a College Library Project (1977-1982) sponsored jointly by CLR and the National Endowment for the Humanities, and a self-study of the DePauw University Libraries (1980-1982) sponsored by the Lilly Endowment and the Office of Management Studies of ARL.

Larry Hardesty

Hardesty's postsecondary education includes a bachelor's degree in education magna cum laude (history and political science) from Kearney State College in 1969, a master's in education (history) from Kearney State College in 1971, an MLS from the University of Wisconsin-Madison in 1974, and a master's in education (instructional systems technology) from Indiana University-Bloomington in 1978. In 1979, he was admitted to candidacy in the doctoral program of the Graduate School of Library and Information Science at Indiana University-Bloomington. His doctoral dissertation, recently completed, is entitled, "The Development of a Set of Scales to Measure the Attitudes of Classroom Instructors Toward the Undergraduate Educational Role of the Academic Library."

Hardesty is currently on the CLIPS Committee of ACRL's College Libraries Section, the Evaluation Subcommittee of the Bibliographic Instruction Section, and the ACRL Standards and Accreditation Committee. In 1979-1981 he was chair of the ad hoc Committee on Standards of the College Libraries Section.

His library experience began at Kearney State College as first a reference librarian and then as coordinator of user services from 1973 to 1975. In addition to his book, Use of Slide/Tape Presentations in Academic Libraries (Jeffrey Norton Publishers, 1978), he has authored or co-authored articles in College & Research Libraries, the Journal of Academic Librarianship, Library Research Quarterly, Drexel Library Quarterly, and Library Scene. He has presented papers at state, regional, and national conferences on such topics as bibliographic instruction, library self-studies, and academic library standards. Currently he is the chairman-elect of the College and University Division of the Indiana Library Association.

SHARON HOGAN, deputy director of Temple University Libraries since 1982, has been named acting director of the university libraries to succeed former director Joseph Boissé. Before coming to Temple University, Hogan held a number of library positions at the University of Michigan. She was reference librarian of the Harlan Hatcher Graduate Library at Michigan from 1971 to 1974, bibliographic instruction and reference librarian from 1974 to 1978, and assistant to the director of libraries from 1978 to 1982.

Sharon Hogan

She received her MLS from Michigan in 1968 and a bachelor's degree in history from the College of William and Mary in 1967. Hogan has taught in Michigan's graduate American Studies program and its graduate library school. In Philadelphia she has been teaching in the professional continuing education program at Drexel University.

Hogan is co-author of Learning the Library: Concepts and Methods for Effective Bibliographic Instruction, published in 1982. She is also a co-founder and co-editor of Research Strategies, a professional journal dealing with the growth of knowledge, publishing patterns, and reference tools for bibliographic access.

She is currently chair of the ACRL/ALA Task Force, a member of the ACRL Budget and Finance Committee, and is a candidate for ACRL vice president/president-elect in the 1984 election.

Librarians Sought for Exchange with France

Last spring the American Library Association was asked by the American Embassy in Paris to assist in setting up an exchange of academic librarians between the U.S. and France. As a result, ACRL aided the Franco-American Commission for Educational Exchange by finding placements for two librarians in U.S. academic libraries for this school year. On October 17 Marie-Françoise Bois, section chief of the Medical Library at the University of Limoges, arrived to work at the Houston Academy of Medicine-Texas Medical Center Library. Her host for the year is librarian Richard Lyders. In January, François Lapélerie, head of the Science Library at the University of Aix-Marseilles, will arrive to work at the Rice University Library in Houston. His host for the year will be James C. Thompson, associate university librarian.

Because the request this year was made on short notice, true exchanges were not arranged—that is, librarians from the U.S. are not going to France to take the place of visiting French librarians. However, it is planned that next year several American librarians will exchange jobs with French academic librarians.

For the 1984-85 school year, the French government will choose two or three librarians to send to the U.S. ACRL will then find librarians with the same subject specialty who speak French and whose libraries are willing to agree to an exchange of staff. The French librarians will be coming from university libraries and will be middle management staff or above. U.S. librarians applying for this program should be from university or large college libraries, have at least five years professional experience, and be U.S. citizens. The Fulbright Commission will pay the travel expenses of both French and U.S. librarians. The French government will pay the salaries of the French librarians and the U.S. librarians will need to have their salaries paid by their home institutions.

ACRL will know whom the French have selected to send to the U.S. by March 1984, and we will then look for librarians who have the same specialty and meet the criteria outlined above. If the French, for example, want to send another medical librarian and an African Studies librarian, we will be looking for experienced people in those fields who speak French and whose libraries are willing to exchange staff.

We are now trying to build a file of librarians who are interested in being considered for this program. Interested French-speaking academic librarians should investigate the possibility of exchange with their employers and, if they get tentative approval from their own institutions, should send their names and curriculum vitae to Sandy Whiteley at the ACRL office. In March we will contact those librarians and try to arrange exchanges for September 1984.—Sandy Whiteley, ACRL/ALA, 50 E. Huron St., Chicago, IL 60611.

Metcalf was one of the first recipients of ACRL's Academic or Research Librarian of the Year award in 1978 and served as ALA President in 1942-1943. His lifelong commitment to his profession is summed up in the most recent edition of Who's Who in America: "I was fortunate enough to decide my profession (Librarianship) in 1905 and have never regretted it and am still active in it 75 years later, consulting, traveling, and speaking, and publishing."

Keyes D. Metcalf

Recognition of his library building consulting came in 1976 at ALA's centennial conference in Chicago when the Library Administration Division cited him for having made outstanding contributions to building planning. Responsible for the Lamont and Houghton libraries at Harvard as well as the New England Deposit Library, Metcalf wrote what is still the definitive book for academic library buildings, Planning Academic and Research Library Buildings (1965). He was also author of Library Lighting (1970) and, most recently, Random Recollections of an Anachronism (1980).

Metcalf filled consultant assignments for over 600 institutions including those in Australia, India, South Africa, Ireland, Japan, Canada, Costa Rica, Great Britain, Venezuela, Abu Dhabi, Libya, Saudi Arabia, and Iran. He was a consultant on the National Capital Development Commission in Canberra in 1961-1968 and Fulbright lecturer to Australia in 1958-1959.

Also as a consultant he wrote major reports for the library schools of Illinois and Columbia in the 1940s. His numerous articles and reports have added substantially to our understanding of academic libraries. In 1959 E.E. Williams compiled a bibliography of Metcalf's writings during the period when he was director at Harvard.

Upon the occasion of his retirement from Harvard in 1955 Metcalf wrote a report on the Prospects and Problems of the Harvard University Libraries which was widely studied by academic librarians. His famous seminar at Rutgers in the late 1950s included many people who later became library directors at major universities.

From humble beginnings as student assistant at Oberlin College Library, he rose to become acting librarian in 1916-1917. His next assignments were at the New York Public Library, where he was consecutively chief of the stacks (1913-1918), executive assistant (1919-1927), and chief of the Reference Department (1928-1937).

Besides 12 honorary doctorates, Metcalf held a bachelor's degree in history from Oberlin College and a certificate and diploma from the Library School of the New York Public Library granted in 1914. He served as vice-president of the American Antiquarian Society and as trustee to the Belmont Public Library, the Boston Athenaeum, and Radcliffe College.

In the July 1976 issue of C&RL, David Weber described Metcalf: "I believe his greatest contributions were those in personal development and cooperative programs. To both of these broad areas he brought special wisdom, particularly with respect to staff development and training." ■■

CONFERENCE ON INTEGRATED SYSTEMS

The first national Conference on Integrated Online Library Systems held September 26-27, 1983, in Columbus, Ohio, provided the 253 registrants from 39 states, Canada, and three overseas countries with an intensive review of the state-of-the-art of integrated library systems.

The structure of the conference paralleled the process of planning for and obtaining such a system. Plenary sessions featuring many library consultants (Richard Boss and Rob McGee, among others) and developers of systems (John McGowan from Northwestern University and Vinod Chachra from Virginia Polytechnic) surveyed the available systems, outlined technical administrative principles and the steps involved in selecting a system, and gave a glimpse of future developments (Lawrence Woods, University of Notre Dame).

Fred Glazer of the West Virginia Library Commission offered suggestions for obtaining support for a state-wide multi-type library system, and Pat Barkalow (Pasadena Public Library) provided some insight into the impact of integrated library systems on multi-jurisdictional libraries in consortia.

The sessions were augmented by contributed papers by practitioners from many types of libraries, among them Richard Meyer (Clemson University) on "System Evaluation as an Alternative to the RFP," and Edward Garten (Tennessee Technological University) on "Using a Microcomputer within the LAMBDA Catalog System."

Procedures for obtaining the proceedings of this conference and details on the next conference scheduled for October 1984 are available from Genaway & Associates, Inc., P.O. Box 477, Canfield, OH 44406. ■■
