PROFILES

DONALD R. HUNT, former associate director of libraries at Oregon State University, became director of the library at California State University, San Jose, April 1, 1972. He followed Dr. Stuart Baille who is now teaching in the San Jose School of Librarianship.

Preceding his appointment as director at San Jose, Hunt held a wide variety of positions at the Oregon State University library. Each position offered him the opportunity to study the operation of a specific department in a major university library. At various times he served as head of reference, head of public service and associate director.

He was involved with the automation of Oregon State acquisition system and of their financial accounting system. He also played a major role in the planning of an addition to Oregon State University library building.

Hunt has also been extensively involved in state, regional, and national professional organizations. Among other appointments, he has served as a member of the Pacific Northwest Library Association executive board and as a member of the American Library Association Membership Committee for Oregon. While at Oregon, he served in several capacities as a member of the Oregon State University Chapter of AUP.

STANLEY MCELDERRY, dean of the School of Library Science at the University of Texas, has been appointed director of The University of Chicago library. McElderry will head the University's campus-wide library system, which contains more than three million holdings. The system includes the new Joseph Regenstein Library, the William Rainey Harper Memorial Library, the libraries of the Law and Divinity School, School of Social Service Administration, the Department of Art, and the science libraries. He succeeds D. Gale Johnson, professor and chairman of the Department of Economics, who has served as acting director since Herman Fussler returned to full-time research and teaching as a professor in the University's Graduate Library School last July. Fussler had been director since 1948.

Stanley McElderry

McElderry, 53, has been at the University of Texas since 1968. Prior to coming to Texas, he served as coordinator of library services for the California State Colleges, visiting lecturer at the School of Library Science at the University of Southern California, and librarian of the San Fernando Valley State College. He also served as circulation librarian at the University of Minnesota and assistant director of the library of the University of Oklahoma.

McElderry did graduate work at the University of Chicago from 1947 to 1950 and again during 1955 and 1956. He received his degrees from the University of Southern California. He is the author of the Report of the Ad Hoc Committee on Library Development and Coordination of the University of Texas System and co-author of The Implications of Modern Technology for the Small College Library, as well as other publications in the field.

During the time McElderry was at Chicago in the late 1940s he served as assistant to the director of the library, developing under Fussler's guidance a functional organization for the system. At Texas, he has been a professor in the Graduate School of Library Science and chairman of a committee to coordinate library development for the six campuses of that university.

He also has served in a variety of capacities for the American Library Association, the Texas Library Association, and the California Library Association. He was a member of the Chancellor's Library Development Committee for the California State Colleges and the Higher Education Library Committee for the Coordinating Council for Higher Education in California, as well as similar other special committees in California and Texas.

reader series in Library and Information Science

- 1 Reader in Library Services and the Computer
Edited by Louis Kaplan. In the age of the computer what demands are being made of librarians, and to what extent are librarians responding to these new demands for service; what news services are feasible; how does a library staff organize itself in order to enter upon computerization? The emphasis is on the computerized library as seen from the management and administrative point of view: 239 pp. payment with order $8.95 if billed $9.95
- 2 Reader in American Library History
Edited by Michael H. Harris. This volume is intended to contribute to the reader's understanding of the historical development of libraries and librarianship in America from the colonial period to the early twentieth century. An examination of American library history shows how the role of the library has been defined and redefined through the years, and will illuminate those social needs that stimulated the rise and encouraged the support of libraries over the past 300 years. Contributors include Jesse H. Shera, Kenneth Brough, Howard Clayton, David Mearns, Samuel Rothstein and David C. Weber. 242 pp. payment with order $9.95 if billed $10.95
- 3 Reader in Cataloging & Descriptive Classification
Edited by Ann F. Painter. This particular collection of readings has been assembled with one major objective—to bring to the majority of students some idea of what descriptive cataloging and classification are all about; not the how-to but, rather, the why. These readings are intended to either supplement a basic course in the organization of materials and information (more traditionally labelled cataloging and classification) or to serve as primary readings for seminars in the principles and theory of both. 320 pp. payment with order $9.95 if billed $11.95
- 4 Reader in Library Administration
Edited by Paul Wasserman and Mary Lee Bundy. Designed to provide insight into the organizational dynamics of libraries, this volume includes essays by specialists in library administration as well as by management experts in other fields such as Edward Litchfield, Peter Drucker, Amitai Etzioni, and Herbert Simon. Reader in Library Administration focuses upon administrative processes rather than upon techniques and is not intended to provide solutions or formulae. 403 pp. payment with order $9.95 if billed $10.95
- 5 Reader in Research Methods for Librarianship
Edited by Mary Lee Bundy and Paul Wasserman. This volume is concerned not only with the design and conduct of research but also with the philosophical and social implications of research on librarianship. It includes varied academic treatments of research, illustrative examples of research theories and field accounts as well as samples of actual research instruments. Contributors include David Riesman, C. Wright Mills, Arthur Vidich, Peter Blau, and William Foote Whyte. 363 pp. payment with order $10.95 if billed $11.95
- 6 Reader in the Academic Library
Edited by Michael M. Reynolds. The emphasis of the book is to illustrate problems representative of the nature of higher education and of library administration, as opposed to describing operational innovations or giving histories of particular libraries. Among the librarians whose articles appear in the book are Stephen A. McCarthy, Andrew H. Horn, Robert B. Downs, Maurice Tauber, Jessie H. Shera, and Herman H. Fussler; among those from other fields are Clark Kerr, John D. Millett, Edward C. Benfield, Charles E. Bidwell, Peter Sammartino and Ben Euwema. 379 pp. payment with order $9.95 if billed $10.95

J. TROY PETRIE, associate professor and chief, Humanities Division has retired after twenty-nine years at the City College of New York library.

DOROTHY M. SCHULLIAN, the first curator and principal developer of the History of Science Collections in the Cornell University libraries, retired at the end of June. An established authority on the history of medicine when she came to Cornell in 1961, Ms. Schullian has guided Cornell's efforts in the history of science from a nucleus of books in the history of embryology and anatomy into one of the world's most comprehensive collections in the history of sciences with more than 25,000 listings. The collections were the first of their kind among university libraries.

J. RONALD TODD retired from the library of the University of Washington on June 30 after a long and distinguished career with the University Libraries. After a long period of service as reference assistant, curator of the Northwest Collection and assistant chief reference librarian, he became chief reference librarian in 1952. He was later made first special assistant to the director for Collection Development and subsequently Collection Development officer. During this latter period, he led in the reorganization of the libraries method of developing its collection and in preparing the basic and supplementary statements on the Libraries Collection Development Policy.

ALFRED TRUMP, director of the library at South Dakota University since 1952, retired June 30 of this year.

ROBERT H. WHITFORD, chief, Engineering Library, after forty-seven years with the City College Library of the City University of New York has retired. # you can't beat Checkpoint

CHECKPOINT now protects over 8 million books and journals in over 125 school, college, university, special and public libraries in the United States, Canada, Puerto Rico and Britain. That's more than all other systems combined.

Why the overwhelming preference for CHECKPOINT? Many reasons . . . among them:

1. CHECKPOINT performs as promised . . . documented inventories prove book losses from accidental carry-out and deliberate pilferage are reduced by almost 90 percent.
2. CHECKPOINT protects your entire collection . . . no more closed stacks or restricted reserves. With CHECKPOINT you can relax.
3. CHECKPOINT offers you a nationwide service organization.
4. CHECKPOINT is reliable . . . the only system that cannot be defeated by shielding or magnetic cancellation.

Quite literally, you simply can't beat a CHECKPOINT system.

Let us take you to inspect a nearby installation. Or ask us to send additional information. No obligation, of course.
