ACQUISITIONS

• Collins Memorial Library at the UNIVERSITY OF PUGET SOUND has been named recipient of two extremely rare books from the estate of Lionel Pries. According to Desmond Taylor, director of the library, the two-volume Holinshed Chronicles, published in 1577, are valued at over $7,700 and have come to the university through the generosity of Robert W. Winskill, a 1947 UPS graduate.

Taylor said the manuscripts are particularly celebrated because Elizabethan dramatists drew many of their plots from Holinshed's pages, and nearly all Shakespeare's historical plays, as well as "Macbeth," "King Lear," and part of "Cymbeline," are based on the Chronicles. The volumes received by the university are in especially fine condition, he added.

Also given to the school by Winskill are ten vellum manuscript leaves ranging from 1150 to the sixteenth century A.D. which, along with the Chronicles, will be housed in the library's new rare books and manuscripts area, designed for the longtime preservation of such documents.

• The UNIVERSITY OF MISSOURI at St. Louis Archives and Manuscripts Division has recently received the papers of Margaret Hickey, which have been arranged for use. The collection includes scrapbooks and correspondence dating from the 1940s, a photograph collection, and a series of taped interviews with Margaret Hickey. Margaret Hickey, a lawyer by profession and prominent in national and international organizations, is currently senior editor (public affairs) of the Ladies Home Journal. Her career of public service dates from the 1940s when she served as chairman of the important Women's Advisory Committee of the War Manpower Commission during World War II. She was also president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs. More recently, Margaret Hickey chaired several presidential commissions on the Status of Women and is currently chairman of the Voluntary Foreign Aid Commission of the Agency for International Development. Internationally, Margaret Hickey is a member of the executive committee of the International Council on Social Welfare and has served on the Board of Governors of the League of the Red Cross Societies. Additionally, she has been a consultant and adviser to a number of foundations and trustee for Tuskegee University and Brandeis University.

• An outstanding collection of books by and about T. E. Lawrence was recently presented by George Fullerton to the Honnold Library, CLAREMONT COLLEGES. Mr. Fullerton, a California native whose primary collecting interest is Western Americana, has amassed a substantial library during his sixty years as a collector of rare books.

Distinguished by copies of limited editions, association copies, and specially bound items, the Lawrence collection includes books by this complex, legendary man, his translations and introductory material to other authors, the major biographies, all controversial and none definitive, and significant books providing background on Arabia.

Lawrence's major works are represented by first editions of The Seven Pillars of Wisdom, on the Arab revolt, and The Mint, chronicling his life as an airman under the name J. H. Ross, accounts of archaeological expeditions as an Oxford scholar including the 1936 Golden Cockerel Press edition of Crusader Castles and The Diary, printed by the Corvius Press in 1937. The Golden Cockerel Press' Secret Despatches from Arabia is included.

Notable among the translations are first editions of Lawrence's version of The Odyssey under the name T. E. Shaw and the printed but unpublished "Letters" and "More Letters from T. E. Shaw to Bruce Rogers," written in connection with the translation of The Odyssey. The authorized biographies by Robert Graves and Lidell Hart contrast with the later demythicizing Lawrence of Arabia by Richard Aldington.

In all, this notable gift consists of forty-one printed volumes and a miscellany of letters, articles, and ephemera concerning Lawrence.

• A Council on Library Resources (CLR) grant of $210,000 to the ASSOCIATION OF RESEARCH LIBRARIES (ARL) will enable the five-year-old Office of University Library Management Studies (OMS) to continue and broaden its operations through September 1978.

Originally funded by CLR in 1970-72, with continuing support provided for the period of 1972-75, OMS has played a significant role in the library management field with its practical research and development, information exchange, and organizational training programs.

In the research and development area, operation of its Management Review and Analysis Program (MRAP)—a self-study technique assisted by the OMS-designed Manual, training sessions, and consultation—has been and will continue to be a priority interest of OMS. To date, twenty-one research libraries have participated in this intensive evaluation of management practices.

Heart of the OMS information exchange program is the Systems and Procedures Exchange Center (SPEC). Information collected on library practices and management techniques is summarized in SPEC Flyers and made available to ARL members and nonmembers alike in the form of SPEC kits. Other OMS publications are the OMS Occasional Papers and the ARL Management Supplement.

In the training area, OMS sponsors special-focus workshops, management skills institutes, and a training film program in addition to providing direct assistance to member libraries in designing training courses for their staffs.

These activities will be continued under terms of the new CLR grant. In addition, several new programs are under consideration by OMS and its advisory group, the ARL Management Commission. They are: a study of the public services function in research libraries; design of a performance audit technique; and development of specialized training packages for application in research libraries.

• The COUNCIL ON LIBRARY RESOURCES (CLR) has announced an Advanced Study Program for Librarians for 1976-77. The new program will complement the council's ongoing Fellowship and Academic Library Management programs, presently seeking their eighth and third classes of fellows and interns respectively.

The new program is designed to further the development of subject specialists for the nation's research and academic libraries. It will enable up to five librarians to pursue a year of full-time graduate course work in a scholarly discipline—one traditionally considered within the "liberal arts and sciences"—at a graduate school of distinction in the chosen field of study. The program is not intended to support work in "professional" areas such as library science, business administration, or management, nor may the funds be used to travel or for writing a dissertation.

The awards cover graduate study for one academic year (1976-77), with successful candidates receiving stipends of up to $15,000—based on salary and normal benefits received from the home institution for a comparable period during 1975-76—plus graduate tuition and fees for two semesters or three quarters and some assistance for necessary moving costs. Although a candidate need not have been accepted by a graduate school at the time of filing the application, receipt of the award is dependent upon such acceptance by an approved institution.

Applicants must meet the following requirements: age 50 or under; master's degree in library science from an accredited school; five years of professional library experience; citizen of the U.S. or Canada or with resident status in either country; a demonstrated interest and competence in the scholarly discipline of choice as indicated by work already done; qualities that will facilitate work with persons of high scholarly attainment; and a leave of absence to cover the period of study.

Completed applications must be postmarked no later than November 8, 1975. Awards will be announced in April 1976 for study to begin within the 1976-77 academic year.

Interested librarians may receive application forms by sending a self-addressed #10 envelope or mailing label to: Advanced Study Program for Librarians, Council on Library Resources, Suite 620, 1 Dupont Circle, Washington, DC 20036.

• The COUNCIL ON LIBRARY RESOURCES (CLR) is accepting applications from and nominations of mid-career librarians of outstanding leadership potential for its 1976-77 class of up to five academic library management interns.

Aimed at the development of future managers for the nation's large research and academic libraries, the CLR program has thus far provided opportunities for two groups of five interns to spend a full academic year working closely with the directors and top administrative staff of several of the country's great academic libraries.

The librarians selected in 1974 are at present completing their internships at Princeton and Columbia universities and the universities of Michigan, California at Los Angeles, and Tennessee at Knoxville. Those recently chosen for

• The Library of Congress has mounted an exhibit in honor of FRITZ KREISLER's 100th birthday. Fritz Kreisler—born in Vienna on February 2, 1875, died in New York on January 29, 1962—was one of the great personalities of the twentieth century. He impressed millions of music lovers with his highly individual interpretations and his infinitely charming compositions. As a violinist he was unique, and as a man he was loved by all who knew him and heard him.

The library's association with the artist began in 1949 when he presented two rare manuscripts to the Music Division: Brahms's Violin Concerto and Chausson's Poème for violin and orchestra. These scores may be seen in the display. Then, in 1952, Mr. Kreisler donated to the Library of Congress his Guarneri del Gesù violin. Made in 1733, it is considered to be one of the finest instruments in existence. This is now on permanent display in the Whittall Pavilion. Three years later he gave the library a large collection of his own manuscripts of original compositions and arrangements. Varying from his classical string quartet to his lighter and ever popular Viennese melodies, these autographs vividly reflect an artist and a man whose career spanned the world.

• OLD DOMINION UNIVERSITY of Norfolk, Virginia, has received the final payment of $35,846.58 from the estate of Miss Alice R. Burke, one of the first faculty members at the institution when it was the Norfolk Division of the College of William and Mary. With the payment, the total bequest of $185,846.58 is complete.

According to Robert Granville Burke, friend and executor of her will, the bequest was made to establish a section in ODU's library which will be devoted to government and political science. This will be done as soon as possible, in accordance with the wishes of Miss Burke, and the section will be known as the "Alice R. Burke Collection."

Dr. John W. Ramsey, professor of political science at the university, has been appointed chairperson of a faculty committee established to develop guidelines for the purchase of books and other library materials to be included in the collection. Concerning the importance of the bequest, Ramsey said, "The Alice R. Burke bequest comes at a propitious time in the life of political science at ODU. We are involved in two master of arts degree programs and have several new undergraduate and graduate programs planned for the next five years. While a great deal of attention has been paid to building our holdings, with considerable success, the very [small] budgets of past years have precluded the expansion of our resources in every area of a very eclectic discipline."

Miss Burke, who died May 10, 1973, joined the faculty of what is now ODU in 1931, the second year the school was open. During her eleven years at the institution, she taught courses in government, political science, and English, and was registrar from 1937 to 1942.

• The first volumes of the WOODSTOCK THEOLOGICAL LIBRARY have arrived at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C. The Rev. Edward Glynn, S.J., director of the Woodstock Theological Center, said that the Woodstock Library, which contains 150,000 volumes, is among the country's largest and most important theological libraries. It will be housed in the university's Lauinger Library on the main campus. The Woodstock Theological Library was formerly part of Woodstock College, a school of theology for Jesuit students and seminarians in New York.

• The National Science Foundation (NSF), the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science (NCLIS), and the Council on Library Resources (CLR) have announced the establishment of an ADVISORY GROUP ON NATIONAL BIBLIOGRAPHIC CONTROL. The mission of the jointly sponsored group is to advise the three sponsoring agencies on how best to coordinate their programs and to recommend priorities for action.

When requirements for specific projects to enhance national bibliographic control are agreed upon, the sponsors will be asked to set up working groups for each task. The members of these working groups will be drawn from the functional areas of principal interest to the three sponsoring agencies: libraries, abstracting and indexing services, publishing, and information delivery services. Activities of the working groups will be supported by the three sponsoring agencies; the advisory group will monitor their activities and recommend further action as appropriate.

Although the members of the advisory group come from the functional areas of interest, they are not primarily representatives of their parent organizations. Instead, each was chosen for his background, maturity, judgment, and reputation for getting things done.

Their names and their respective terms of appointment are: W. T. Brandhorst, director, ERIC Processing and Reference Facility—two years; James L. Carmon, assistant vice chancellor for computing systems, University of Georgia—two years; Dan Lacy, senior vice-president, McGraw-Hill, Inc.—three years; Jerrold Orne, professor of library science, University of North Carolina—four years; William Welsh, director, Processing Department, Library of Congress—four years; Ronald L. Wigington, director, Research and Development, Chemical Abstracts—three years. Lawrence G. Livingston, of the CLR staff, serves as chairperson.

The concept for the advisory group was developed at an NSF-CLR-sponsored meeting on "National Bibliographic Control" which was held April 17 through April 20, 1974, in Rosslyn, Virginia. Representing libraries, abstracting and indexing services, publishers, and vendors, participants at the meeting joined together in urging the establishment of an ongoing body of the type described.

In operation, the advisory group will draw upon expertise from all segments of the information community for the solution of specific, common problems, attempting thereby to enhance cooperation among those who publish, process, and store information in all its forms. The end goal is better national bibliographic control for the benefit of those who use information.

Staff support and files of the advisory group are located in the offices of the Council on Library Resources. Requests for information on the project should be directed to the Advisory Group on National Bibliographic Control, One Dupont Circle, Suite 620, Washington, DC 20036, or telephone (202) 296-4757.

● "TO SET A COUNTRY FREE," the major Library of Congress exhibition on the Bicentennial of American Independence, opened in the Great Hall of the library on Thursday, April 24, a date which coincided with the 175th anniversary of the creation of the library. It will remain on view through 1976. Borrowing its title from Thomas Paine's American Crisis—"We fight not to enslave, but to set a country free, and to make room upon the earth for honest men to live in"—the exhibit draws heavily from the library's rich and varied resources in U.S. history, displaying rare books, manuscripts, prints and engravings, broadsides, maps, and newspapers of the Revolutionary War era.

Of special interest in the exhibit are three documents of major significance in the Revolution. Taken from the library's collection of Jefferson papers, Thomas Jefferson's famous "original Rough draught" of the Declaration of Independence—a holograph manuscript containing suggested alterations penned by the hands of John Adams and Benjamin Franklin and the changes made by the Congress—is on view in the center of the library's Great Hall in a case designed especially for this showing. The other items of major interest are the "Olive Branch" petition, sent to King George III by members of the First Continental Congress in 1775, which is on loan to the library for this exhibition from the Public Records Office, London, and the exchange copy of the 1778 Treaty of Conditional and Defensive Alliance Between France and the United States, signed by King Louis XVI and his foreign minister, the Count de Vergennes, on loan to the library from the National Archives. The "Olive Branch" petition and Treaty of Alliance are also displayed in special cases in the Great Hall.

Other notable items in the exhibit include the

By arrangement with the Wing Revision, Studies in Bibliography will, in the forthcoming volume (Volume 29, 1976), begin regular publication of additions and corrections to the second edition of the Wing Short-Title Catalogue. Suggestions for corrigenda and related correspondence may be sent to Mr. Clinton Sisson, Research Librarian, Alderman Library, University of Virginia, Charlottesville, VA 22901.

first edition of Thomas Paine's pamphlet Common Sense, printed in Philadelphia in January 1776; Pierre L'Enfant's panoramic drawing of West Point; a view of Savannah, from the Ozanne Collection, at the time of the unsuccessful American attempt to recapture that city from the British; and The Sentiments of an American Woman, an anonymous, undated broadside in which the author recounts the deeds of famed heroines of the past. On view are some of the letters written by Grace Growden Galloway to her Loyalist husband, Joseph, after he had escaped from Philadelphia; they were tightly folded up, hidden in buttons and other wearing apparel, and smuggled through the American lines. During the Revolution, scenes, maps, and figures were drawn on powderhorns. Two of these powderhorns are included, one belonging to Robert Kelmns, dated 1778, in "Bed Ford" [Pennsylvania?], and the other belonging to James Downie, designed by E. Crosby in 1781, depicting the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown. A poignant human note is provided by a manuscript letter from British army officer John André to George Washington following Major André's capture as a spy, in which he pleaded unsuccessfully for execution by a firing squad rather than by hanging. The first printing of the Declaration of Independence is also displayed; published in Philadelphia by John Dunlap, this broadside was probably prepared on the night of July 4-5, 1776.

The exhibit is presented in several sections tracing the history of the American Revolution from the end of the Seven Years' War in 1763, when Great Britain began to reconsider her unarticulated policy of "salutary neglect" toward her North American colonies, to the Treaty of Paris in 1783, when Great Britain acknowledged the sovereign independence of the United States.

Accompanying the exhibit is a profusely illustrated account of the story of the American Revolution, also entitled To Set a Country Free, which is available for $4.50. It is for sale at the library's Information Counter in the ground floor west lobby of the Main Building, or by mail from the Information Office, Library of Congress, Washington, DC 20540; all mail orders must be prepaid. The booklet was produced through the Verner W. Clapp Publication Fund.

PUBLICATIONS

• A book of more than 200 prints and photographs—a sampling of one of the world's largest pictorial collections—has been published by the Library of Congress. Viewpoints, A Selection from the Pictorial Collections of the Library of Congress presents for the first time a broad survey of the library's extensive holdings in prints and photographs by American and foreign artists. Publication of the 223-page book coincides with the seventy-fifth anniversary of the formal organization of the visual arts collections at the library. Most of the photographs reproduced in the book were part of the exhibit "Viewpoints" held at the library in 1962 to suggest the various approaches and wide range of subjects found in the work of photographers and printmakers.

The publication was prepared by Alan Fern, chief of the library's Prints and Photographs Division; Milton Kaplan, recently retired curator of historical prints; and other library staff members.

Viewpoints is divided into seven general categories—World History, Transportation, United States History, The American Scene, Architecture in the United States, The Lively Arts, and Artists' Prints. Within each section, the photographs and prints are arranged in chronological order. Annotations that accompany each picture briefly explain its technical or historical significance. The reproductions are in black and white.

ANSI Z39 Subcommittee on Serials Holdings Statements Formed

The Z39 Subcommittee 40 on Serials Holdings Statements has recently been formed. The chairperson is Glyn Evans, director of library services of the State University of New York, and the other committee members include Richard Anable (CONSER), Paul Fasana (NYPL), Lois Hacker (CUNY Graduate Center), Mary Sauer (LC-National Serials Data Program), and Bob Tannehill (Chemical Abstract Service).

The committee wants to examine as many examples of serials union lists or local serials lists holding statements as it can in the course of its work. It would also like to elicit comment from editors and compilers of such lists.

If you wish to submit comment and/or samples (title page, prefatory material, and sample text pages are essential) to the committee, please forward them as soon as possible to Glyn T. Evans, Director of Library Services, State University of New York, Central Administration, 99 Washington Ave., Albany, NY 12210.

The library's pictorial collections provide extensive coverage not only of the United States but of foreign countries. Among the items included in the new publication are two Crimean War photographs (1855) by the English photographer Roger Fenton which are some of the first examples of war reporting; a lithograph depicting the first landing of Americans in Japan under Commodore M. C. Perry in 1853; and a 1936 drawing of Stalin by German cartoonist Josef (Sepp) Plank indicating early signs of antagonism and distrust between Germany and Russia.

The earliest known photographic image of the U.S. Capitol (ca. 1846), attributed to John Plumbe, Jr., is included in a selection of prints and photographs of early American architecture. A sampling of stock posters, lithographs, and photographs depict the theater and the lively arts in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Reproductions of prints by prominent American and foreign artists—a sampling of the library's rich collections of works of art—among them Edgar Degas, James A. McNeill Whistler, and Albrecht Dürer, comprise the final section of Viewpoints.

The items in the publication are representative selections from the library's holdings of more than 10 million prints and photographs, which have previously been described in part in Guide to the Special Collections of Prints and Photographs in the Library of Congress (Washington, D.C.: Library of Congress, 1955, now out of print), compiled by Paul Vanderbilt, and in American Prints in the Library of Congress: A Catalog of the Collection, compiled by Karen F. Beall and the staff of the Prints and Photographs Division (Johns Hopkins Pr., 1970), and in various exhibition catalogs published by the library. Viewpoints, however, is the first illustrated publication to present a broad overview of the collections.

Viewpoints, A Selection from the Pictorial Collections of the Library of Congress is available for $7.75 from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, DC 20402 (Stock Number 3014-00001), or in person from the Information Counter, ground floor, Library of Congress Main Building.

DECLASSIFIED DOCUMENTS

NEWS

Vol. 1, No. 2

HIGHLIGHTS FROM THE SECOND QUARTERLY COLLECTION OF THE 1975 DECLASSIFIED DOCUMENTS REFERENCE SYSTEM

FOUR "DIPLOMATIC VOLUMES", ORIGINALLY EXCLUDED FROM THE "PENTAGON PAPERS", ARE NOW AVAILABLE IN DDRS

"United States-Vietnam Relations 1945-1967" is the Vietnam Task Force study series prepared by the Rand Corporation which became known as the "Pentagon Papers". Although most of this multi-volume set was made public, one way or another, in recent years, it was not until the Spring of 1975 that the four so called "diplomatic volumes" were released in slightly "sanitized" form following declassification review by the State Department. These segments of Volume VI of the Series total 692 pages, and all four dealt with the history of the peace negotiations. They are described as follows:

United States-Vietnam Relations 1945 (sic) - 1967 [Vietnam Task Force studies prepared by the Rand Corporation; that part of the "Pentagon Papers" not previously released to the public.] Formerly classified TOP SECRET SANITIZED copy. Declassified 1975.

First Materials from Presidential Libraries Enter Declassified Documents System

Featured Items Include the Clark Clifford Papers Coverage of the Indonesian Crisis, and Analyses of De Gaulle's Foreign Policy

Among the 454 declassified documents which were abstracted, indexed and offered on microfiche in the 2nd Quarterly collection of 1975, more than 180 were acquired directly from the collections of the Truman and Johnson Libraries.

These are the first documents to enter the system from the presidential libraries. The third Quarterly collection will feature additional recently declassified documents from the Eisenhower and Kennedy libraries, and future Quarterlies and the Retrospective Collection will include documents from all four of these libraries.

Of even greater long range significance however, is the fact that Carrollton Press has for the first time initiated its own mandatory review requests for large groups of still classified documents which we have identified in the presidential libraries.

The Clark Clifford Papers

In response to 24 hour Soviet notice that all U.S. military freight trains proceeding to Berlin through the Soviet Zone would be stopped and searched. General Lucius Clay asserted in a "Top Secret/Urgent/Eyes Only" cable that free entry must be maintained and stated that he wanted to issue orders to our troops to shoot Soviet soldiers if they tried to enter U.S. trains.

This brought a Top Secret order from Army Chief of Staff General Omar Bradley that no convoys should be forced through the Soviet Zone without Department of Army approval. Clay replied the same day that military trains had been cancelled and an "air-lift" begun.

These and four other documents from the Clark Clifford papers cover the detailed day-to-day communications and decisions during this tense period.

In all, a total of 72 declassified documents from the Clark Clifford papers at the Truman Library are included in the 2nd Quarterly collection. These range in subject matter from the Chinese Civil War (including vintage CIA reports) to Top Secret Reports to the President by Special Counsel Clifford on U.S. Relations with the Soviet Union (1946).

Indonesia and Malaysia

White House during 1964-65, and nearly all deal with the deterioration of Indonesian-US relations which was caused primarily by the growth of Communist influence in Indonesia and by Indonesia's conflict with Malaysia.

The Third Quarterly collection will open up still more information on Indonesia with the inclusion of a large number of documents acquired from the Kennedy Library.

CATALOG ENTRIES GROW INTO ABSTRACTS

Although our Quarterly Catalog was originally designed along the lines of GPO's Monthly Catalog, it became apparent immediately that even expanded and annotated bibliographic citations would not describe the documents adequately for truly efficient reference use.

Therefore, in order to give the reader indications of not only the content but also

Korean War Coverage Expanding

Joint Chiefs considered complete withdrawal, use of A-bombs — Trouble with Syngman Rhee

The Cumulative Subject Index to the first Quarterly Catalog contained a substantial number of subject entries under the main heading "Korean War." These were merged with those from the second Catalog to give a combined total of 194 entries dealing with this subject (listed under 126 separate headings and sub-headings).

Reactions of Joint Chiefs to Chinese Intervention

Of particular interest among the documents in the second quarterly collection are those released by the Joint Chiefs of Staff which describe contemporary top level military analyses of the massive Chinese military intervention from the point-of-view of U.S. global strategy.

Soon after the extent of the Chinese intervention had been determined, the initial JCS reaction, as expressed in Top Secret documents dated December 3, 1950, was that continued U.S. military operations in Korea would be unsound and that plans should be made for evacuation of all forces to assist in the defense of Japan (which was considered threatened).

Plans were made to reinforce Japan and place worldwide atomic capabilities in immediate readiness. U.S. commands were alerted and authorized to implement the then "current war plan" if attacked by Soviet forces.

Tactical Use of Atomic Weapons Considered

Later, in 1951, four formerly Top Secret documents described the development of "Department of the Army Policy Concerning the Employment of Atomic Weapons in the Korean Operations". A special team recommended those circumstances under which atomic weapons should be used. The difficulty of identifying suitable targets was mentioned and specific plans were made to develop more effective means of combat intelligence in support of atomic weapons.

The Situation re Rhee

Another important document is a formerly Top Secret, 104 page State Department report on the conversations between Pres. Syngman Rhee and Asst. Secretary of State Walter Robertson during the period June 22nd through July 26, 1951. These discussions grew out of the crisis between the US and Rhee, which had caused the development of the "Everready" plan to oust the Korean president if he could not be "kept in line" in compliance with US concerns.

COLBY REPORTS TO FORD ON CIA'S DOMESTIC ROLE

The Second Quarterly Collection contains CIA's response to the President's request for comments on the December 22nd article in the New York Times alleging CIA involvement in a "massive domestic intelligence effort."

The documents themselves are copies of those released on July 8, 1975 as the result of a Freedom of Information Act request from Martin Halperin of the Center for Strategic Studies. They consist of a six page cover letter signed by Colby plus 55 pages comprising 9 "Annexes." Most of the latter are internal CIA administrative documents, many of which have been heavily "sanitized" (portioned out).

Accordingly, all Quarterly Catalogs will henceforth be published in two parts: Part One, Abstracts; and Part Two, Cumulative Subject Index.

THE "NO OVERLAP" DEPARTMENT — PART ONE

- America's 2,533 largest philanthropic foundations have assets of more than $20 billion and make annual grants totaling $1.5 billion (an average of more than $400 million a day), according to the new fifth edition of The Foundation Directory. For librarians the directory is the major source of reference information in the field and also an important guide when they seek foundation grants for libraries.

The directory, prepared and published by the Foundation Center, describes major foundations in detail and summarizes their giving. Each of the foundations has assets of $1 million or more or has made grants totaling $500,000 annually. All states except Alaska and North Dakota are represented.

Included in the $30.00 price of the directory are four new semiannual supplements. Two will list the names of about 26,000 foundations in the country for which the center can provide recent information. The alternate issues will list the names of those foundations in the directory for which updated information is available.

the effect of the regulations on intercollegiate football. Actually, a more serious dispute centered on HEW's right to make regulations on specific administrative practices of colleges and universities. Setting aside the athletic entanglement as a special issue, Rep. James O'Hara (D—Mich.), chairman of the House select subcommittee on higher education, argued that requiring institutions to establish internal grievance procedures and carry out extensive self-analysis activities exceeded the requirements of the statute.

"I don't want you to discuss the wisdom of this procedure. I think it's probably a good idea," O'Hara said to then-secretary of HEW Caspar Weinberger at one point during hearings on the regulations, "but the Congress only said 'Thou shalt not discriminate.' Where in the plain language of Title IX does the Department of Health Education and Welfare find the authority to tell institutions to set up internal grievance procedures?"

Accusing HEW of usurping the legislators' role, O'Hara concluded that "some way has to be found so that Congress writes the laws and nobody else." Privately, O'Hara bemoaned the fact that the long-brewing battle between Congress and HEW over "administrative lawmaking" had erupted over regulations on affirmative action, a subject which most liberal Democrats favor.

After weeks of testimony and two acrimonious subcommittee meetings in which representatives Shirley Chisholm and Bella Abzug lobbied assiduously for the regulations, the O'Hara motion to disapprove the regulations was bottled up in committee and on July 21 they went into effect.

At one point in the Title IX hearings a Republican congressman had suggested the HEW procedures were unnecessary and that affirmative action complaints should be handled instead by the independent Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. On the contrary, re-torted Rep. Frank Thompson, Jr. (D—N.J.), that "would be a mistake of major proportions unless EEOC can be straightened out. They have a backlog of three years now and I don't share the gentleman's confidence that they can handle the work."

The relationship between EEOC, the Labor Department, and other federal agencies charged with enforcing civil rights and employment regulations had already been held up to public examination during June. In addition to unveiling a history of lackluster administration at EEOC, Rep. Augustus Hawkins (D—Calif.) subcommittee on equal opportunities discov-
