Measuring Academic Library Performance: A Practical Approach

by Nancy Van House, Beth Weil, & Charles McClure

This easy-to-use set of output measures is designed to assist you in measuring the impact, efficiency, and effectiveness of academic library activities. No specialized training or knowledge of statistics is needed.

The manual is also available with a database software package to make data-collection even easier. The software will run on any IBM-compatible microcomputer with at least 640K of RAM memory and DOS 3.1 or higher.

Recruiting The Academic Library Director: A Companion To The Search Committee Handbook

by Sharon Rogers and Ruth Person

Recruiting the Academic Library Director and the Search Committee Handbook together offer practical advice for successfully recruiting and hiring the right director for your library. These two volumes take you through the entire recruitment process including position analysis, comprising the search committee, identifying qualifications, recruiting a good candidate pool, identifying the top candidates, interview and campus visits, and the appointment. The Search Committee Handbook was prepared and published by the American Association for Higher Education under the direction of an advisory committee on which Sharon Rogers served. The publications are available from ACRL only as a two volume set.
