As an information resource, Web rings are a good starting point on the Internet. Whether just adding links to existing Web rings or taking on the responsibility of developing and maintaining one, libraries are a natural place to exploit the potential of the Web ring as a minefield of topic-specific information.

Letter to the editor

Thank you for publishing "The Mansfield protocol for laptop computer circulation" (Jul/Aug 1998). Alfred University is starting a similar program and it was very helpful to read an article that outlined the specifics of an established program. It's so much easier to begin a project like this after reading such a relevant article than trying to start something from scratch!—Laurie McFadden, librarian, Alfred University, mcfadden@king.alfred.edu
