RICHARD A. MATZEK, librarian at Sacred Heart University in Bridgeport, Connecticut, for the past eleven years, assumed the position of librarian and director of Nazareth College's rapidly expanding Learning Resources Center on September 1.

Richard A. Matzek

Nazareth President Robert A. Kidera said Matzek was chosen primarily because of his "long and distinguished service in all areas of library operations and his involvement in planning and constructing a library building comparable in size to the enlarged facility now under construction at Nazareth." Matzek, a professor on the Sacred Heart faculty, was recommended by a search committee composed of representatives of the Nazareth faculty, staff, and student body.

Matzek succeeds Charles L. Higgins, who has served as director of the Nazareth Learning Resources Center since February 1964. Currently, the center's resources include 160,000 volumes and 1,100 periodicals and serials, the third largest collection of any liberal arts college in the Rochester area.

Kidera said Higgins will assume the duties of assistant to the president for library development. In that capacity, he will assist in the total planning and fund raising effort involved in the expansion of the Learning Resources Center and its programs.

Nazareth officials broke ground August 1 for a $700,000 addition to the present Learning Resources Center, which will double the present size of the facility and make possible a major expansion of services, particularly in the audiovisual area. The addition also will provide shelf space for a collection expected to reach 200,000 volumes within the next seven years, and incorporate additional study, typing, and meeting areas.

Matzek is a graduate of Marquette University and received his M.A. degree in Library Science from the University of Wisconsin.

Among other professional activities, Matzek serves as associate editor of Religious Book Review and Connecticut delegate and vice-president of the New England Library Board's panel of counselors. In 1973, he completed a major study, Academic Library Cooperation in Fair- field County, commissioned by the Higher Education Center for Urban Studies, an area consortium of institutions of higher education.

He is a frequent contributor to professional journals and reviews books for the New York Times Book Review.

CONRAD H. RAWSKI, information specialist and Petrarchan scholar, has been named dean of the School of Library Science at Case Western Reserve University (CWRU).

Conrad H. Rawski

His appointment, approved by the board of trustees and announced by President Louis A. Toepfer, became effective July 1, 1977.

His selection followed an extensive nationwide search conducted with the advice of faculty, students, and alumni. He replaces William Goffman, who became dean in 1971 and will remain as a member of the faculty.

Dean Rawski, who joined the faculty of the School of Library Science in 1962, has been coordinator of the doctoral programs in library and information science and has been active in the development of the school as a center for research in information science, knowledge communication, and related systems. He served as acting dean during the spring semester of 1975.

Born in Vienna, Austria, Dean Rawski earned the M.A. and Ph.D. degrees at the University of Vienna, and a Certificate in Librarianship at the Austrian Institute for Historical Research.

In 1939 he came to the United States where he pursued postdoctoral studies at Harvard and Cornell universities. In 1950 he joined the faculty of Ithaca College where he became director of Graduate Studies and, later, dean of the School of Music, a post he held from 1953 to 1957.

He earned the M.S. in Library Science at CWRU and was head of the Fine Arts Department of the Cleveland Public Library from 1957 to 1962. He is the author of numerous publications concerning the scientific study of subject literatures, their properties and structures, and of an English translation of Petrarch's De remediis utriusque fortunae of 1366.

Dean Rawski lives with his wife in Chagrin Falls.

Y. T. FENG, assistant director (for research library services) of the Boston Public Library, has been appointed librarian at Wellesley College in Wellesley, Massachusetts, it was announced by the college's president, Barbara W. Newell.

Y. T. Feng

Feng assumed her new post on December 1, succeeding Helen Brown, who is retiring after twenty-four years as college librarian. Before joining the Boston Public Library staff, Feng was affiliated with the Harvard College Library, first as reference assistant, then as specialist in book selection, and finally as assistant librarian. Feng has also served as a library trainee in the New York Public Library and as a library assistant at the University of Denver.

Yen-Tsai Feng, who was born in Peking, China, received the A.B. degree from the University of Shanghai and studied law at the Université de L'Aurore in Shanghai. She holds the A.M. degree in English literature from Colorado State College, the Ph.D. in international relations from the University of Denver (including eighteen months of special fellowship in Paris, France), and the M.S.L.S. from the Columbia University School of Library Science.

Some of Feng's professional activities include life membership in the American Library Association (ALA) and serving on many ALA committees, including the (ALA) Select Group to Visit the Library of Congress. She is a member of the Depository Library Council to the Public Printer.

Feng has been a visiting lecturer at the Simmons College Graduate School of Library Science. She is also a visitor, Museum of Fine Arts, Department of Public Education, and a fellow, Massachusetts Historical Society.

Feng's civic and cultural activities have included membership on the Ad Hoc Task Force on Ethnicity in New England, the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, the Governor's Task Force on Ethnic Heritage, the Board of Directors of the Boston YWCA, and the Massachusetts Bicentennial Ethnic Task Force.

At Wellesley College, Feng will administer the Margaret Clapp Library, which has a collection of approximately 600,000 volumes and more than 2,400 periodicals. Two new wings, completed in 1975, provide space for approximately 325,000 more volumes and accommodate new developments in library technology. The library is a selective government document depository and a full member of the Greater Boston Consortium of Academic and Research Libraries that includes the Boston Public Library, Boston University, Boston College, Tufts, Brandeis, the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Wellesley is a 2,000-student women's liberal arts college, located on a 500-acre campus, twelve miles west of Boston.

WILSON LUQUIRE has been appointed associate director of library services at East Carolina University's Joyner Library.

Wilson Luquire

A native of Greenwood, South Carolina, Luquire is an alumnus of Furman University with advanced degrees from Indiana University.

Before joining the ECU library staff, he was a staff librarian at Indiana University and held an academic library management internship at the Joint University Libraries in Nashville, Tennessee, which was sponsored by the Council on Library Resources.

In addition to his degrees in library science, Luquire holds music degrees from Furman and Indiana universities and is an accomplished organist.

His professional memberships include the

Correspondence Wanted for In-service Staff Development Programs for Reference Librarian

Marjorie Karlson, Head, Reference Department, University of Massachusetts Library, Amherst, MA 01003, would like to correspond with any reference librarians in university libraries who are interested in the subject of in-service staff development programs for reference librarians.

She is interested in any programs of this type, but her particular concerns are in-service training for the beginning reference librarian and methods reference librarians use to review their performances on specific questions dealt with at the reference desk.

Please write to her at the address given above if you would like to share ideas and experiences on the subject.

American Library Association, the Tennessee Library Association, and the American Guild of Organists.

Transylvania University, Lexington, Kentucky, has appointed JOHN SHERIDAN head librarian of Frances Carrick Thomas Library.

John Sheridan

Before coming to Transylvania, Sheridan was technical services librarian at Knox College in Galesburg, Illinois. In that supervisory position, he planned and implemented the installation of the Ohio College Library Center (OCLC), a computerized network that provides information on and location of books and periodicals in any one of the 1,200 libraries that are members. In addition, he managed a pilot utilization study, taught a library skills course, and served on several steering committees.

He also served two years at Kearney (Nebraska) State College as coordinator of technical services and as librarian of acquisitions and cataloging.

For one year, Sheridan became a volunteer librarian for the Model Cities Neighborhood Information Center in Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

He holds two master's degrees, one in library science from the University of Wisconsin—Milwaukee and the other in Greek studies from Indiana University in Bloomington. His bachelor's degree is from City College of New York with major studies in classics.

He and his wife Dindy have one child.

KEITH M. COTTAM is the new assistant director for public services and employee relations at the Joint University Libraries in Nashville. He was previously the assistant director of libraries for the undergraduate library and associate professor at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville (UTK).

Cottam began his library career as a library intern in the Brooklyn Public Library in 1963. He served briefly as a librarian there in 1965 before moving to Southern Illinois University, Edwardsville, as the assistant social science librarian and instructor. In 1967 he accepted the post of head of the Social Sciences Library at Brigham Young University (BYU), Provo, Utah, where he achieved the rank of assistant professor.

As an educator he has taught in the Brooklyn Public Library Reading Improvement Program, and from 1969-72 he held a joint appointment at BYU as supervisor of the Library Technician Program. From 1972-77 he was a visiting lecturer in the Graduate School of Library and Information Science at UTK.

He has been active in state library associations, having served as editor of Utah Libraries and in numerous convention, program, committee, and section assignments for the Utah Library Association and the Tennessee Library Association. In 1975 he was named the Mary U. Rothrock Lecturer by the East Tennessee Library Association. He is also active in ALA program and committee work, including the ACRL/ULS Steering Committee and the ACRL Undergraduate Librarians Discussion Group.

Cottam is the co-author of Writer's Research Handbook (A. S. Barnes, 1977) and since 1968 has published more than twenty articles and reports in the fields of library service and higher education, as well as in his avocational interest, bicycling. He is a regular book reviewer for Choice and has reviewed for ARBA.

During the summer of 1971 he worked as an advisor to the National Institute of Administration in Saigon, Vietnam. In 1972 he was selected as a BYU faculty member to the honor society of Phi Kappa Phi. In 1975 he was awarded a CLR fellowship for a cooperative study, with the Association of Research Libraries, Office of Management Studies, of the role of managerial and technical specialists in academic research libraries.

WILLIS M. HUBBARD has been appointed director of the Hugh Stephens Library at Stephens College, Columbia, Missouri. He comes to Stephens from Eureka College, Eureka, Illinois.

Willis M. Hubbard

While at Eureka, he served for four years as head librarian while also directing the audiovisual department and doing some teaching in political science. In 1972 he was appointed to a part-time position as assistant to the Eureka College president, with responsibilities for institutional research and planning as well as remaining head librarian. His institutional research and planning position was supported by a U.S. Office of Education Title III grant.

While at Eureka College, Hubbard held a research grant from the Carnegie Corporation of New York to study management information needs of small academic libraries. A report of this research is forthcoming. He also is a member of the National Consulting Network for Liberal Arts Colleges, funded by a grant from the Kellogg Foundation. Both of the grants are administered through the Council for the Advancement of Small Colleges.

Hubbard served on the Advisory Council of the Illinois Valley Library System and chaired the system's Personnel Development Committee. He was a member of the Advisory Board of the Library Technical Assistant program of Illinois Central College.

Prior to his association with Eureka College in 1968, he served as assistant science librarian (1963-67) and assistant social sciences librarian (1967-68) at Southern Illinois University—Carbondale.

He has a B.A. degree from Monmouth College, M.S.L.S. from the University of Illinois, and an M.A. in political science from Southern Illinois University. He is a member of Pi Sigma Alpha national political science honorary fraternity. He has also received a number of civic awards and has served on various public boards. He is listed in the three latest editions of Who's Who in the Midwest.

He is a member of the Missouri Library Association and the American Library Association and serves on the LAD Library Organization and Management Section (LOMS) Statistics Committee for College and University Libraries. He has presented programs at the 1975 and 1976 Annual Forums of the Association for Institutional Research and at the 1976 Annual Conference of CAUSE (College And University Systems Exchange).

At Stephens, Hubbard's primary responsibilities will include developing better use of the library by students, expanding interlibrary cooperation, and the evaluation and development of the library collection.

RONALD D. FREDERICK has been named director of the College of Saint Benedict Library in St. Joseph, Minnesota. Frederick comes to

Ronald D. Frederick

Minnesota from Indiana State University, Terre Haute, where from 1972 to 1977 he was a reference librarian and history bibliographer. Prior to this position he was a library associate at the University of Michigan and a junior officer in the U.S. Naval Reserve.

Frederick has an M.A. in International Relations from the University of Oklahoma and an A.M.L.S. from the University of Michigan. He has been involved in national, state, and local archival activities. Frederick is a member of the American Library Association, the Society of American Archivists, and the Association of College and Research Libraries.

ALAN R. TAYLOR of Johns Hopkins University has been appointed director of the University of Rochester (UR) Libraries, effective January 1, 1978.

Taylor has been associate librarian at Johns Hopkins since 1974.

A native of England, he came to the United States in 1963 as librarian for African studies at Indiana University. He also served as bibliographer and instructor in the African Studies Program and as visiting lecturer at Indiana's Graduate Library School until 1973, when he became assistant director of libraries for reader services at the University of Maryland.

After completing library studies in England in 1953, he became assistant librarian of the National Archives of Rhodesia and Nyasaland in Salisbury, Southern Rhodesia. He was chief librarian from 1956 to 1963.

Taylor founded and was first secretary of the Library Association of Rhodesia and Nyasaland in 1959 and was a delegate to the International Conference on Cataloging Principles in Paris in 1961. He was honorary librarian of the Central African Journal of Medicine from 1955 to 1963, a member of the founding committee of the Cooperative African Microform Project in 1964, and a member of the Association of Research Libraries' Farmington Plan Sub-Committee on Africa from 1964 to 1969.

"We are very pleased that after a careful search we have found a librarian of Mr. Taylor's caliber and experience to direct the university's libraries," said UR President Robert L. Sproull. "He has had a distinguished career in library service. We are fortunate to have his expertise as we strive for further improvements in our university library system."

Among his many professional activities, Taylor has served as chairman of the African Studies Association's Archives-Libraries Committee from 1965 to 1967, as president of Indiana University's Librarians' Association in 1970-71, and as chairman of the Association of College and Research Libraries' Asian and African Section in 1975-76. He is currently a member of the advisory committee to the Association of Research Libraries' Collection Analysis Project.

He has received several travel grants for special research, including a grant from the government of Rhodesia and Nyasaland in 1961 to study government libraries in Britain and France; a grant from Indiana University in 1963 to study library and archival resources in South, Central, and East Africa and Europe; a Fulbright-Hays Faculty Fellowship from the U.S. Office of Education in 1967 to study library and archival resources in English- and French-speaking West Africa; and a grant from the Midwest Universities' Consortium for International Activities in 1967 to carry out a library acquisitions program in the Cameroons region, the Ivory Coast, and The Gambia.

Taylor is a member of the Library Association and the American Library Association and is the author of numerous articles in professional and scholarly journals and bibliographies dealing with Africa. He also has been active as a library consultant and lecturer.

He studied at the Ealing Technical College's School of Librarianship, the Northwestern Polytechnic School of Librarianship, the Harrow Technical College, and the University of South Africa. He was a library assistant at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine from 1951 to 1953. He holds the professional rating of British Chartered Librarian.

MILIMIR DRAZIC, director of the library at Castleton State College in Castleton, Vermont, for the past three years, has been named the new director of the Victoria College-University of Houston Victoria Campus Library.

Milimir Drazic

Roland Bing, Victoria College president, and George C. Taulbee, Sr., acting chancellor of UHVC, who made the announcement, said Drazic's appointment is subject to approval by the board of regents of the University of Houston system and the board of trustees of the local college.

The new director's library positions in the United States also have included associations with Manchester Community College in Manchester, Connecticut; Glencoe Public Library in Glencoe, Illinois; Northwestern University Library; and the University of Kentucky Library.

Taulbee said Drazic's extensive experience in large and small state-supported institutions as well as community libraries made him particularly qualified for the library directorship here.

In addition to his work in this country, Drazic was head librarian at the University of Belgrade in Yugoslavia from 1948 to 1953. He also has been a foreign-language teacher in Strangnas, Sweden.

As part of his education, he spent five years at the University of Belgrade, receiving his master's diploma in 1950. He attended graduate school at the University of Copenhagen and the University of Kentucky and has completed course requirements toward a Ph.D. at the University of Chicago.

Bing, in commenting on Drazic's appointment, said he was "particularly impressed with the librarian's experience abroad." Drazic speaks English, German, French, Danish, and Serbocroat and reads English, Russian, Hungarian, Czech, Swedish, and Norwegian. He also studied piano in Vienna for ten years.

Drazic was selected from more than fifty applicants replying to a national search. He is married and has one child.

Ron Naylor, who had been serving as acting librarian for UHVC, has taken a position as personnel officer for the library at the University of Maryland in College Park.

BILLY RAYFORD WILKINSON became the associate university librarian at the University of Illinois at Chicago Circle on August 15, 1977. He will be responsible for assisting Beverly P. Lynch, the university librarian, in all managerial, budgetary, and personnel matters for all areas of the university library.

A native of North Carolina, Wilkinson did his undergraduate work at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He received an A.B. in English in 1955 and an M.S.L.S. from the university's School of Library Science in 1960; in 1971 he received the D.L.S. from the School of Library Science at Columbia University. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Beta Phi Mu. His dissertation, subsequently published, was a study of undergraduate student use of the reference departments of four institutions: Swarthmore College, Earlham College, Cornell University, and the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor.

Wilkinson began his career in librarianship during his student days, working from 1951-56 both in part-time and in full-time positions in the reference and circulation departments of the Wilson Library at the University of North Carolina. In 1959, he moved to Cornell University where he held a number of positions in the public service area, including that of assistant reference librarian and that of librarian of the Goldwin Smith Library, before becoming the first Librarian of the Uris Undergraduate Library in 1962. The success of the Uris Library was in great part due to the organizational and planning skills of Wilkinson. He stayed at Cornell until 1967 when he began his doctoral studies at Columbia University. Upon completion of his doctorate in library science, he joined the staff of the New York Public Library.

Wilkinson comes to Chicago Circle from the position of staff relations officer for the New York Public Library, with responsibility for the personnel and staff development programs of the entire system, including the research libraries, the central circulating library, and all the branches, a position he has held since 1971.

Wilkinson has wide and varied experience that will be of great benefit to Chicago Circle as it develops and expands its services. He has a strong publications background that includes, in addition to his dissertation, several articles on service to undergraduates, a reader in undergraduate libraries now on press, and articles on staffing needs and personnel problems in libraries.
