TONI CARBO BEARMAN has been selected as executive director of the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science (NCLIS). Bearman is currently special projects consultant for strategic planning and new product development at the Institute of Electrical Engineers in London. She will assume her new responsibilities with NCLIS upon completion of her present assignment.

Toni Carbo Bearman

A graduate of Brown University, Bearman went on to receive a master's degree from the Drexel University School of Library and Information Science, and a Ph.D. in the management of information resources in 1977.

In addition to her library education and experience, Bearman served as consultant to the National Federation of Abstracting and Indexing Services (NFAIS) and was executive director of NFAIS from 1974 to 1979, when she developed cooperative projects with other sectors in the library/information community. In part through her efforts, the Federation became more involved in national networking, gaining representation on the Network Advisory Committee of the Library of Congress and the Council on Library Resources.

Bearman has been a member of the boards of the American Society of Indexers, the Association of Information and Dissemination Centers, and the Center for Literacy. She has also chaired committees of the Special Libraries Association and the American Society for Information Science, and is currently serving on the ASIS council.

JOHN T. GILLESPIE has been appointed dean of the Palmer Graduate Library School on the C.W. Post Center campus of Long Island University, Greenvale, New York. He is replacing Ralph Folcarelli who resumed his fulltime teaching position at the school in September. Gillespie had previously served as dean of the school from 1971-1976.

Gillespie was born in Fort William (now Thunder Bay), Ontario, and completed his undergraduate work at the University of British Columbia, Vancouver. He graduated from Columbia University with an MLS in 1956 and received his Ph.D. from New York University in 1968.

In 1962 he joined the fulltime faculty of the Palmer Graduate Library School. Among the dozen books he has written or collaborated on are: Creating a School Media Program, Junior-plots, Paperback Books for Young People, and Best Books for Children. He has been active in many professional associations and has served in such executive roles as president of the Nassau Suffolk School Library Association and president of the School Library Section of the New York Library Association.

GEORGE R. PARKS has been appointed university librarian at the Everett Needham Case Library, Colgate University, Hamilton, New York, effective September 1. Parks succeeds Bruce Brown, librarian since 1963, who has taken on the responsibilities of collections librarian.

Parks has been dean of university libraries at the University of Rhode Island since 1974, and university librarian since 1969. He also served as librarian at the Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore and as assistant librarian and chief administrator at the University of Rochester Libraries. He received his MLS degree at the University of Michigan and did Ph.D. course work at Johns Hopkins.

George R. Parks

Among other activities, Parks served as a member of the steering committee of the Rhode Island Governor's Conference on Libraries and was an official observer at the White House Conference on Libraries and Information Services in 1979. He was also chair of ACRL's first national conference in Boston in 1978.

HANNELORE B. RADER, formerly associate professor and coordinator of the education/psychology division of the Center of Educational Resources at Eastern Michigan University, has been named director of the Library/Learning Center at the University of Wisconsin-Parkside. She will also administer the staff and services of the library, the media production and audio-visual division, and the Archives and Area Research Center.

Rader's ebullience and commitment to user service made her a popular speaker at national library conferences and workshops, and she has written extensively on bibliographic instruction in professional publications. She has also been an officer of the Reference and Academic Sections of the Michigan Library Association and of the Eastern Michigan University Women's Association, and has recently been elected to the ALA Council.

Rader earned three degrees from the University of Michigan: master of library science in 1968, master of arts in German literature in 1971, and a bachelor of arts in Russian/Spanish in 1960. She completed a specialist program in educational leadership in 1978 from Eastern Michigan University.

From 1970-1976 she served as orientation librarian and head of the orientation program. That position included administration of a College Library Resources Program grant to Eastern Michigan University, which contributed to the establishment of the national LOEX clearinghouse for information on bibliographic instruction and a national conference on that topic held annually on the Eastern Michigan University campus.—Carolyn Kirkendall, Director, LOEX Clearinghouse, Eastern Michigan University, Ypsilanti.

GARY E. STRONG was appointed California state librarian on September 10. He served as deputy state librarian at the Washington State Library, Olympia, from June 1979.

Strong is a past president of both the Oregon Library Association and the Pacific Northwest Library Association. He also served on the Board of Directors of the Pacific Northwest Bibliographic Center and the Task Force of the Pacific Northwest Regional Health Sciences Library, both in Seattle.

Strong earned his MLS degree at the University of Michigan and a bachelor's degree in education at the University of Idaho. As director of the Everett Public Library in Washington, he produced and hosted community access television talk show programs and election coverage for Snohomish County.

MICHAEL M. REYNOLDS has been appointed acting dean of the College of Library and Information Services at the University of Maryland, College Park, effective August 1. He has been appointed for a two-year term.

Reynolds received his Ph.D. in library science from the University of Michigan, and he holds a master's degree in public administration from American University, an MLS from Columbia University, and a bachelor's degree from Hunter College.

Since 1969 Reynolds has been associated with the library school at Maryland as associate dean, acting dean, and for the last ten years as professor. He has served as chair of three of the major committees of the school: Admissions, Curriculum, and Doctoral.

Reynolds was the director of the Institute on Cooperative Relationships between Libraries in 1973 which was sponsored by the Maryland Division of Library Development and Services, and he helped organize and direct the Institute on Legal Reference sponsored by the University of Maryland in 1976 and 1978.

HERBERT S. WHITE, a member of the Indiana University library science faculty since 1975 and nationally recognized consultant on library planning and information storage and retrieval technology, was named dean of the Indiana Graduate Library School effective July 1.

White succeeds Bernard M. Fry, the first full-time dean of the 13-year-old school, who is retiring from administrative duties.

The new dean holds the faculty rank of professor of library science, and for the last five years has been director of the school's Research Center for Library and Information Science. Under White's leadership the center has directed a number of major library research projects funded by the National Science Foundation, National Endowment for the Humanities, National Enquiry into Scholarly Communication, and Commission on New Technological Uses of Information.

White has served by appointment of both Presidents Johnson and Nixon on the President's Advisory Committee to Commissioner of Education on College and University Library Resources. He also has been president of the American Society for Information Science and the Special Libraries Association.

Before coming to Indiana in 1975 the new dean was president of Stechert-Macmillan, an international acquisitions agency for books and periodicals.

JAMES F. WYATT has been appointed director of university libraries at the University of Rochester, effective July 1. Wyatt, who had served as a
