HENRIETTE D. AVRAM has been appointed assistant librarian for processing services at the Library of Congress, effective November 7. She will oversee the Library's operations in the areas of acquisitions, cataloging, cataloging products, and the development of related automated systems.

Avram has served since August 1980 as that department's director for processing systems, networks, and automation planning. She succeeds Joseph H. Howard, who became director of the National Agricultural Library in July.

Henriette D. Avram

Avram joined the Library staff in 1965 as assistant coordinator of information systems. Her work on the MARC Pilot Project led to the establishment in 1969 of the LC distribution service for machine-readable cataloging records. In 1970 she was named chief of the MARC Development Office, which was responsible for the design and implementation of automation systems for technical processing operations.

In 1976 she was made head of a new office, LC's Network Development Office, which has played a leading role in the design of a computer-based nationwide library network and the development of library network standards in cooperation with NCLIS, CLR, and other organizations. Four years later she became the Library's first director for processing systems.

For her performance and achievements Avram has received LC's Superior Service Award (1968), the Margaret Mann Citation in Cataloging and Classification (1971), the Federal Women's Award (1974), and an honorary doctor of science degree from Southern Illinois University, Edwardsville (1977). She received the 1979 Academic Librarian of the Year Award from ACRL, the 1980 Award for Achievement from LITA, and the 1981 Melvil Dewey Medal from ALA.

WENDELL A. BARBOUR has been appointed director of the Captain John Smith Library at Christopher Newport College, Newport News, Virginia, effective August 1983.

Barbour was formerly associate director of libraries at Georgia Southern College, Statesboro, from 1977 to 1983 and head of readers' services from 1975 to 1977. He was head of reference at Indiana University Library, South Bend, from 1974 to 1975 and held the positions of newspaper librarian and assistant archivist (1970-1971) and bookstacks librarian (1971-1974) at the University of Illinois Library, Champaign. He was the recipient of an HEA Title II Fellowship in Library Science from the University of Illinois.

Barbour holds an MLS from the University of Illinois and a J.D. from John Marshall Law School. His undergraduate degree is from the University of Florida.

He has made presentations on legal issues in library administration and has organized and presented a program on "Building Libraries for Bibliographic Instruction and User Accessibility" through the ALA Library Administration and Management Association's College and University Libraries Buildings and Equipment Committee at Annual Conference in Philadelphia in 1982. While at Georgia Southern College, Barbour wrote the library's portion of a 5-year renewable Title III grant proposal that has been funded $235,000 by the U.S. Department of Education for its first two years. The grant will be used to automate the library's catalog and circulation systems and to convert its computerized acquisitions and serials operations to this system's hardware.

The SE-LIN System can rapidly produce large quantities of labels that are permanently heat sealed to the spine of the book. A protective overcoating prevents smudging, making labels easier to read.

This advanced system, with improved tracking, is the most efficient, accurate and economical method of permanent spine labeling.

Barbour currently serves on the ACRL Legislation Committee and the Copyright Committee, and was chair of the Georgia ACRL Chapter in 1981-1983.

DON L. TOLLIVER, assistant director for planning and budget at the University of Michigan Libraries, has been named director of university libraries at Kent State University, effective June 1. At that time he will replace Dean H. Keller, who has been appointed interim director.

Tolliver has been at the University of Michigan since August 1980. Previously he was dean of library and learning resources at the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater (1974-1980) and director of the Library Planning Study of the University of Wisconsin System Libraries (1978-1979). He has also headed the Instructional Media Research Unit and was instructor of educational media at Purdue University (1965-1974).

A graduate of Eastern Illinois University (B.S.E., M.S.), the University of Illinois (MLS), and Purdue University (Ph.D. in administration and educational psychology), Tolliver has directed several research projects. These have included strengthening university research library resources, planning and cooperation, library budgeting, and the use of minicourses to improve undergraduate instruction.

He is also a member of the Executive Council and a trustee of the Michigan Library Consortium, and currently serves on the LAMA/LOMS Budgeting, Accounting, Costs and Financing Committee.

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

TONI CARBO BEARMAN, executive director of the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science, has been awarded the 1983 Watson Davis Award by the American Society for Information Science. She and a co-winner of the award, Margaret T. Fischer, principal consultant for Management Decisions in Greenwich, Connecticut, were cited for their "continuous and dedicated service to ASIS membership" at local and national levels for many years.

JUDITH A. HOFFBERG, art librarian, archivist, and editor and publisher of Umbrella, an art review magazine published in Glendale, California, has been awarded a Fulbright grant to New Zealand to work on the archives of famed kinetic sculptor and animated filmmaker Len Lye. After Hoffberg processes the papers and records, a microfiche copy will be available to researchers, scholars, and art and film historians. The grant is for a period of three months from February-April, 1984.

SUZINE HAR NICOLESCU, director of information systems and services, Medgar Evers College of the City University of New York, has been awarded a Fulbright grant as senior researcher from March 1 to July 15, 1984. Nicolescu will conduct research on the cataloging and classification systems of library systems employed by three major Korean University libraries—Ewha, Yonsei, and Sogang—in relation to international standards. The study will determine the feasibility and/or the modifications required for computerizing Korean cataloging information in local and international resource-sharing networks. Nicolescu holds an English degree from Ewha Woman's University in Seoul, as well as a Ph.D. from Simmons College, and an MLS and a master's degree in Romance languages and literature from the University of Denver.

During the 1983 ALA Conference in Los Angeles, the ACRL/BIS Computer Concerns Committee identified a variety of topics which represent major areas of interest and activity relating to the integration of computers into bibliographic instruction. These topics are:

1. Instruction in the use of online public access catalogs;
2. Computer-assisted instruction in library use;
3. End-user searching of computerized bibliographic databases;
4. Computer-mediated online searching;
5. Human-computer interaction.

If you are involved with or interested in integrating computers into bibliographic instruction, we would like to hear from you. The Committee hopes to prepare for distribution a list or directory of librarian contacts in computer concerns relating to bibliographic instruction. The list will be available through LOEX. The information provided will also help us plan future committee studies and programming activities.

Please send the following information to: Joann H. Lee, Chair, ACRL/BIS Computer Concerns Committee, Lake Forest College Library, Lake Forest, IL 60045, by March 20, 1984.

1. Your name, institutional mailing address, and phone number.
2. Your ALA division memberships in section, discussion groups, committees, etc.
3. A brief description of the areas of interest or activity you are: a. presently engaged in (e.g., "provide workshops for end-user searching to chemistry graduate students"); b. planning to incorporate into your bibliographic instruction program (e.g., "working on CAI module for Apple II micro-computer to teach the use of periodical indexes"); c. interested in (e.g., "would like to hear more about using computers to teach patrons to use online catalogs").
4. Additional computer concerns not listed above.
5. Personal expertise relating to the above issues.
6. Publications relating to your project (any journal articles or other publications you have written concerning your work).

Thank you for your cooperation. The results of this call for information will be made available as soon as possible.

The preliminary draft of the directory was distributed before Midwinter Conference. Additional copies are available for $1 from Joann H. Lee at the above address. ■■
