Profiles

LAWRENCE DOWLER, librarian of the Houghton Library at Harvard University and special assistant to the director of Houghton since 1985, has been appointed associate librarian for public services in the Harvard College Library.

Dowler joined the College Library staff in 1982 as associate librarian with administrative responsibilities for rare books, manuscripts and special collections and general oversight of collection development. As part of his new position he will oversee the implementation of an on-line catalog in the Houghton Library.

Lawrence Dowler

Before coming to Harvard, Dowler was acting director of the Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library and associate librarian of the Sterling Library at Yale University. He was instrumental in the planning and development of the AMC format that has become standard for machine-readable bibliographic control of manuscripts and archives, and directed the Harvard-Radcliffe Manuscript Survey and Guide Project, which covered 48 repositories.

Professionally active in research library forums and special collections concerns, Dowler serves on a number of collection and access-related committees at Harvard and elsewhere. In the summer of 1987 he conducted research at the University of Michigan in the uses and users of special collections as the recipient of a Mellon Fellowship.

Dowler is a scholar in American history who holds a Ph.D. (1974) from the University of Maryland.

JAMES F. WILLIAMS II, associate director of libraries at Wayne State University, has been named director of libraries at the University of Colorado, Boulder.

Williams began his career at Wayne State in 1968 and was appointed associate director in 1981. He has served as a member of the U.S. delegation to the People's Republic of China on Exchange of Biomedical Communications, Presidential appointee to the Board of Regents of the National Library of Medicine, delegate to the Michigan White House Conference on Libraries and Information Science, and director of the Kentucky-Ohio-Michigan Regional Medical Library Network.

BETTE ERISKIN, librarian in charge of the Labor Union Collection in the Social Science Library at the University of California, Berkeley, since 1978, retired December 18, 1987. Eriskin began her career at the library in 1955 as a secretary and held various clerical and administrative positions before earning an MLS from Berkeley in 1974.

J. MYRON JACOBSTEIN, librarian for 24 years of the Law Library at Stanford University, California, and a professor of law, retired in August 1987.

DONA LLOYD, assistant catalog librarian at North Texas State University, Denton, retired at the end of 1987 after 19 years of service.

JOSEPH Z. NITECKI, director of libraries at the State University of New York at Albany since 1980, has announced his retirement effective September 1988. He will continue as professor in the School of Information Science and Policy Studies. Prior to coming to Albany, Nitecki served in various administrative capacities on the Milwaukee and Oshkosh campuses of the University of Wisconsin, Temple University, Chicago State University and the University of Chicago. Nitecki has been active in ALA and has served on the University Committee of the International Federation of Library Associations. He has published extensively on the theory of librarianship, library management and technology.

DARREL POPE, assistant media librarian in the Media Library at North Texas State University, Denton, retired January 31 after 23 years of service.

GINETTE RABIER, librarian in the Heffner Memorial Library at Stanford University, California, retired December 11, 1987. Rabier served at Stanford for more than 20 years, beginning in the Falconer Biology Library. She oversaw the development of the Heffner Library from a small reading room to an independent branch library serving the university's applied physics laboratories.

SKAIDRITE RUBENE, humanities cataloger at the University of California, Berkeley, retired December 31, 1987, after nearly 29 years of service. Rubene began working in the Catalog Department in 1959 while studying for her MLS at Berkeley, which she received in 1961. She worked in all aspects of humanities cataloging in addition to a number of special assignments that included selecting materials in her native Latvian. Rubene also served for many years as coordinator for the Catalog Information Desk.

ROBERTA STEVENSON, head of the Conservation and Preservation Department at the University of California, Davis, will retire effective March 31. Stevenson joined the library in 1955 as a cataloger, later serving as assistant head of the Acquisitions Department (1958-1961) and assistant head of the Catalog Department (1961-1963). In 1963 she became head of the Serials Division, which became a Department in 1966. She became head of the newly-formed Conservation and Preservation Department in 1981.

Deaths

ROBERT H. BECKER, retired special assistant to the director of the library at the University of California, Berkeley, died December 18, 1987, after a long illness. A graduate of the University of Oregon, Becker earned his MLS from Berkeley in 1951 while working in the library, where he became reference librarian specializing in Western American and Latin American holdings. In 1961 he was promoted to assistant director, and in 1970 to associate director, a position he held until 1974, when he became special assistant to the director. Becker retired in 1979. An authority on California land grants and maps, he was the author of four books on various aspects of Californiana.

MARJORIE J. BENZINGER, associate librarian and coordinator of the Branch Libraries of the Science and Engineering Library of the State University of New York at Buffalo, died December 21, 1987, at the age of 62. Benzinger had served earlier as senior reference librarian at the Eastern Branch of the Monmouth County Library in New Jersey, as mathematics librarian at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and as reference and serials librarian at the Harvard Medical School Library. She was a member of Phi Lambda Sigma and the Special Libraries Association. Benzinger held a master's degree in mathematics from the University of Chicago and an MLS from Syracuse University.

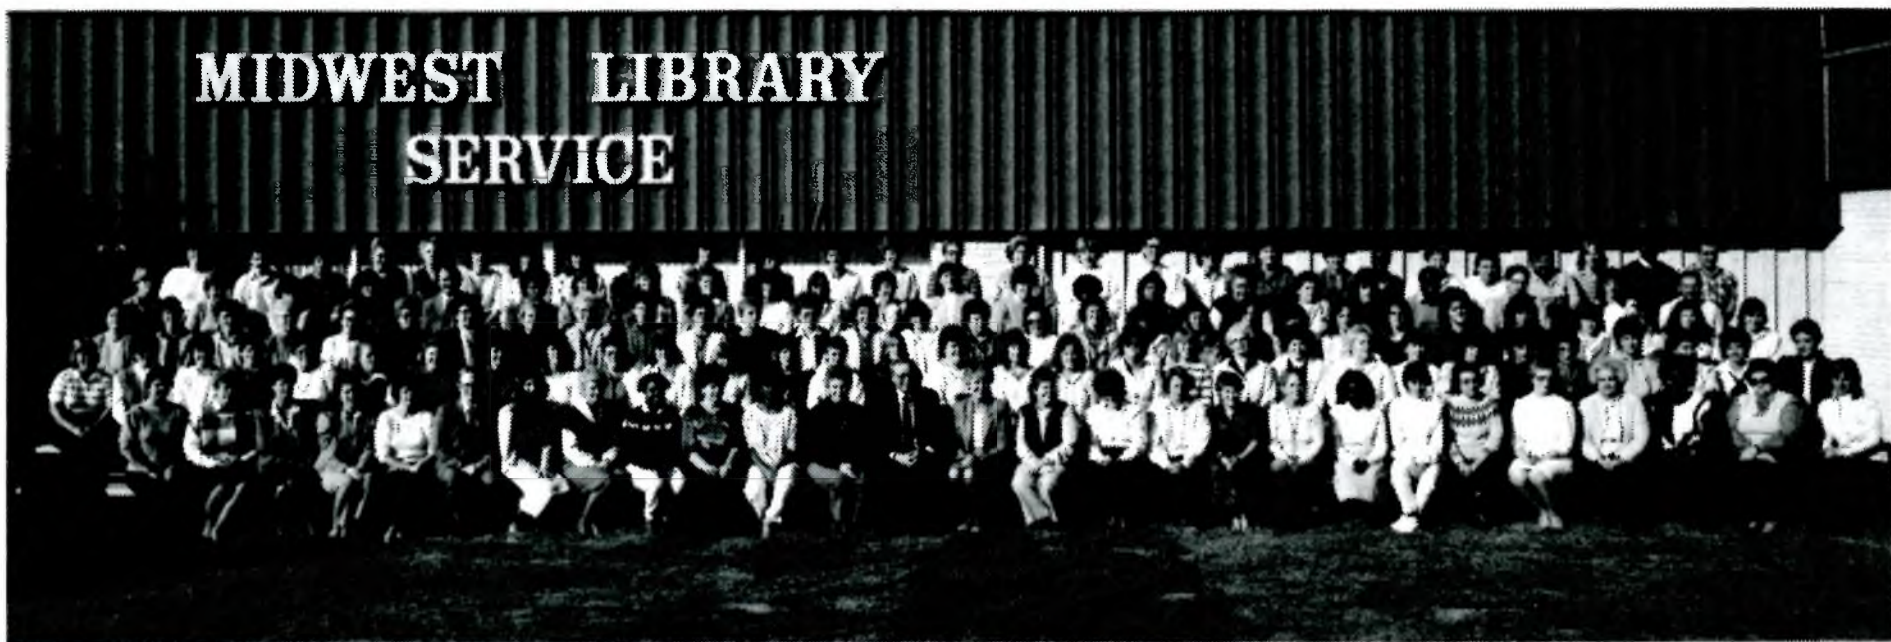

MYRTLE FOSTER, assistant circulation librarian at North Texas State University, Denton, from 1958 to 1970, died December 24, 1987. Foster held a bachelor's degree from the University of Minnesota (1922) and an MLS from Texas Women's University (1955), and had worked in Minnesota, South Dakota and Iowa before coming to Texas.

RICHARD HALVORSON, user services librarian in the Library Satellites at the University of Southern California, Los Angeles, died October 11, 1987, of AIDS. He was 34. Halvorson had joined the USC staff in 1986 following service at the Getty Museum and Pepperdine University. He had been chair of the Professional Development Committee at USC.

MARVINA MILLER, director of libraries emeritus at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, died November 30, 1987, at 84. Miller received his bachelor's degree from the University of North Carolina and his MLS from Columbia University. He worked at the New York Public Library and was director of the University of New Hampshire Library before being named director at Arkansas in 1940. He retired in 1971. During his tenure Miller organized the Special Collections Division, which included an Arkansas collection and the Ozark Folklore Collection, and was instrumental in the planning and design of the new Mullins Library. Miller was active in the Southwest Library Association and other professional organizations and was a contributor to several professional journals.

EVERETT T. MOORE, associate university librarian emeritus of the University of California, Los Angeles, died January 5 following a long illness. He was 78. Moore is perhaps best remembered as the successful plaintiff in a suit against a former California attorney general who interpreted California's Harmful Matter Statute to mean that individual librarians could be prosecuted for distributing "harmful matter" to minors. In February 1976, the California Court of Appeals ruled in "Moore v. Younger" that California librarians were exempt from the Harmful Matter Statute. A native of Los Angeles, Moore received a bachelor's degree from Occidental College, a master's degree from Harvard, and an MLS from UC-Berkeley. He joined the UCLA staff in 1946 and was promoted to head of the Reference Department before becoming associate university librarian. Moore was also a lecturer in the Graduate School of Library and Information Science. His Issues of Freedom in American Libraries was published by ALA in 1964 and in 1974 he received the Robert B. Downs Award for his contributions to intellectual freedom. Moore served for several years on the ALA Intellectual Freedom Committee, the Publications Committee and the ALA Council. A past president of the California Library Association, Moore taught for a year at a university library school in Japan prior to his retirement at the end of 1975. ■■

PUBLICATIONS

• Child Abuse and the Law: A Legal Primer for Social Workers, by Barbara A. Caulfield and Robert M. Horowitz (61 pages, 2d ed., 1987), is a guide to the legal processes a social worker must deal with when pursuing a case of child abuse. This new edition covers recent changes in child abuse laws and legal procedures, such as the use of closed circuit televised testimony. The major elements of the legal process and court procedure are summarized pragmatically. A single copy may be ordered for $4.50 (plus 50¢ for postage) from the National Committee for Prevention of Child Abuse, Publication Sales, P.O. Box 94283, Chicago, IL 60690. ISBN 0-937906-18-12.
