Games of Late Modernity: Homo Ludens 75 Years Later

GAMES OF LATE MODERNITY
Homo Ludens 75 Years Later

15-17 January, 2014

Leusden, Utrecht, Netherlands

The end of this year will be marked by the 75th anniversary of Johan Huizinga's classic study of the Homo Ludens, possibly the single most important Dutch contribution to the international scholarly field of the twentieth century. As the subtitle – A Study of the Play Element in Culture – indicates, Huizinga inquires into a fundamental characteristic of human culture and society: the element of play is present and can be observed in all different aspects of culture, ranging from seemingly innocuous leisure activities to the uttermost serious and advanced systems such as legal or political institutions.

The purpose of this three-day conference is to bring together experts in various disciplines, ranging from the social sciences, the arts, religious studies, philosophy, history, anthropology, psychology, economy, to media studies and gaming. All scholars are invited to shed their light on Huizinga's thesis, while paying special attention to the post-Second World War and present-day situation. The four issues raised above function as focal points around which the experts from various disciplines come together. The idea is, following the wish expressed by Huizinga himself, to create not only a multi-disciplinary but also a truly interdisciplinary scholarly exchange on one of the most important ideas for the understanding of contemporary society.

A Meaningful Life in a Just Society

30-31 January, 2014

Utrecht, Netherlands

The University of Humanistic Studies aims to contribute to a meaningful life in a just society. In celebration of its 25th anniversary the UvH bestows honorary doctorates upon professors Carol D. Ryff (University of Wisconsin) and Joan C. Tronto (University of Minnesota) and organizes an international conference with keynotes from both professors. This conference will take place at the magnificently restored Paushuize (Papal House) – one of the most outstanding monuments in the medieval city centre of Utrecht. With a maximum of only 150 participants this conference offers a unique opportunity to engage in an intimate setting with the latest research on some of today's pressing topics.

Both theories, on psychological well-being and on care, are of the utmost importance to the further development of meaningful human lives in humane institutions in a just society. This conference aims at further exploring questions about the relationship between well-being and a meaningful life. The critical insights of competitive caring, unsympathetic disregard and privileged irresponsibility all point at the injustice produced by an insular concept of wellbeing. We will explore what this critical stance means for concepts of well-being; how institutions endorse, and possibly give shape to what it means to be first of all citizens; and which factors and conditions foster meaningful human lives in caring societies.

IV International Congress Sport, Doping and Society

26 February - 1 March, 2014

Madrid, Spain

Conference Theme: Looking to the Future

We have the pleasure to invite you to the IV International Congress Sport, Doping and Society, that is organized by the Technical University of Madrid (UPM) and the Spanish Anti-Doping Agency. Under the theme “Looking to the future”, it will be presented the results of scientific researches and new methodologies in the field of doping in sport.

From the specific perspective of Social and Human Sciences, we believe that this initiative will contribute to identify the factors that influence the use of doping substances and methods. From this knowledge we hope to foster future prevention and doping control and to promote ethical behavior in sport.

In addition, this Congress will devote a special session aimed for young students, both high school and university levels, which will address issues related to prevention.

7th Global Conference: Interculturalism, Meaning and Identity

18-20 March, 2014

Prague, Czech Republic

Interculturalism stands at the interface between the individual, local groups, societies and cultures. These compete, conflict, co-exist and trigger reactions and responses on a number of levels including the social, the economic, the political and the personal. These are reinforced through language, the media, cultural events, social institutions and migration policies. Amidst all these dynamic and static forms of interaction, identities are built and consolidated.

The previous meeting of this project recognised that identity is not something which is fixed and predetermined but rather is continuously created and recreated from the day-to-day flow of living in communities. With mobility not simply a commonplace factor in society but continuing to rapidly expand, people are faced with challenges to and changes in their own identity as a result of encounters with new cultures, new ways of living and new ways of thinking. People find themselves forging and reforging their identities through integration, assimilation, disintegration, reintegration...and so the pattern continues.

The 2014 conference will build on the work of previous meetings in this series and examine the meaning and parameters of Interculturalism, how it is studied and what it means. How can we talk meaningfully of interculturalism? What role does hybridity play in understanding the way cultures morph, adapt and become suited to their context?

ACP2014 - The Fourth Asian Conference on Psychology and the Behavioral Sciences

27-30 March, 2014

Osaka, Japan

The International Academic Forum in conjunction with its global university partners is proud to announce the Fourth Asian Conference on Psychology and the Behavioral Sciences, to be held from March 27-30 2014, at the Rihga Royal Hotel & the adjoining Osaka International Conference Center, Osaka, Japan.

2014 Conference Theme: "Individual, Community & Society: Conflict, Resolution & Synergy"

This international and interdisciplinary conference will again bring together a range of psychologists, medical doctors and a wide assortment of social scientists to discuss outside the traditional confines of narrow fields of specialism, and in new directions of research and discovery in psychology and the behavioral sciences. As with IAFOR's other events, and by bringing together a number of university scholars working throughout Japan, Asia, and beyond to share ideas, ACP 2014 will afford the opportunity for renewing old acquaintances, making new contacts, and networking across higher education and beyond.

28th International Congress of Applied Psychology

8-13 July 2014

Paris, France

Dear Colleagues, Dear Friends,

On behalf of IAAP, and in collaboration with the French Federation for Psychologists and Psychology (FFPP) as well as French Society of Psychology (SFP), along with the French National Committee of Scientific Psychology (CNFPS), under the umbrella of the French Consortium of Psychology Associations (A-CIPA), I am pleased to confirm that the forthcoming International Congress of Applied Psychology will take place in Paris in early July 2014. Applied Psychology is living a stimulating scientific period, with considerable work in connection to the many societal crisis and events around the world. Claude Lévy-Leboyer, who has played an important role in IAAP, is our Honorary President for this ICAP. The Scientific Program Committee is composed of IAAP members from all over the world, both French and English speaking. The ICAP was organized in Paris the last time... in 1953, and never since did we get the opportunity to host IAAP; therefore, we are happy to invite you all to join us for the 28th ICAP.

Paris, as a congress venue, offers an ideal place to organize a congress of such size, with easy connections from everywhere, a large choice of hotel accommodation, a practical centrally located convention centre and a wide range of cultural spots. The cultural background and historical landscape make Paris one of the most attractive cities in Europe, so, make sure to mark your calendar: July 8-13 2014.

I warmly invite you to join this International Congress of Applied Psychology, ICAP, in Paris, and sincerely hope that you will help us to make this endeavor a success. We will do our utmost to make this scientific event a great meeting connecting practitioners and researchers, and we look forward to welcoming the entire world psychology community in France!

Prof. Christine Roland-Lévy

President of the 28th ICAP; President of the French Consortium of Psychology Associations, A-CIPA
