Dear readers,

We welcome you to the second issue of the year 2019. This time we have two important announcements to make.

First, the creation of a new section in our journal. We have decided to create a new section of "Applied Statistics". The section of applied statistics will cover the whole range of interdisciplinary fields, for example applications of statistical methods as well as data analytics in agriculture, genetics, industry, medicine, economy and physical sciences. In this section, original or innovative applications that make a novel contribution to statistics by adapting or developing methodology, or by applying it for the first time in a field will be considered

Second, the citation index of RCE has been growing steadily. Now we have achieved to pass to Q2 with a Scimago index of 0.94.

We hope you enjoy this issue and invite you to continue reading and submitting your work to Colombian Journal of Statistics.
