

INFORMATION FOR AUTHORS

EDITORIAL POLICY: INFORMAL LOGIC publishes articles in reasoning and argumentation theory and practice.

Primary criteria for articles with a theoretical focus. (1) The article advances the dialectic or constitutes an interesting comment on it: it presents a cogent argument, objection, interpretation or position that is an advance in relation to the background of issues and controversies on the topic; or it casts the issue addressed in a new and worthwhile light. (2) The article makes explicit reference to the pertinent literature on its topic, and it discharges the burden of proof imposed by that scholarship.

Primary criteria for acceptance of articles devoted to the teaching of informal logic, critical thinking or argumentation include: originality; utility; timeliness; and evidence of the effectiveness of the methods, materials, technologies, etc., proposed.

The standard criteria for scholarly publication—topical fit with the subjects covered in the journal; adequacy of coverage to the issue addressed; clarity, organization and literateness of the prose; conceptual clarity and cogency of argumentation—apply ceteris paribus to all articles, notes and reviews.

SUBMISSIONS: INFORMAL LOGIC is now an on-line, open-access journal. Authors should go to the following URL on the Internet for instructions about how to submit articles to be considered for publication:
